LINDYS FLYING OVER CANADIAN WILDS

Today

uy A Mountain Top.
Ford's Birthday.
Little Strong Men.
Shoot First and High.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE

THIS IS WRITTEN in the Catskill Mountains 2,500 feet above the sea. The air here is worth 10 times as much per cubic foot as the air of sea level plains, and the sun's rays, freed from the impediment of 2,500 feet of humid atmosphere, are more powerful.

Take your children to the mountains, every year if you can.

ALL WILL BE able to do it some time, able also to travel all over the world, when airplanes shall have reduced the cost of travel 80 per cent, and with [illegible]ulation replacing competition, and intelligent men concentrating on the general welfare, instead of their own selfish accumulations.

IF THAT SOUNDS like Utopia, remember that our manner of living, with its 25,000,000 automobiles, millions of bathtubs, electric light and running water everywhere would seem better than Utopia to More, who gave that name to his imaginary happy country.

IF YOU EVER buy real estate, and would like to store up wealth to spoil your children, buy a few mountain or high hill tops, near a great big city, taking care to select them with the level or gently slanting tops for airplane landings.

Men will not live forever crowded in cities like ants in their hills. Our cities and slums are born of transportation difficulties, soon to disappear.

SELF-RESPECTING MEN will live on high ground like the eagles, flying to their work in separate specialized cities, landing on the city's roof, going down in "elevators."

One city will be for finance, others for various industries, others for merchandising, wholesale and retail. Thousands of prettily colored planes, driven by women, will land on the department store and dressmakers' city.

Buy mountain lands for your grandchildren, but do not neglect good city lots for yourself and your widow.

HENRY FORD passed his 68th birthday, last Thursday, and called it "just another day." No celebration, no birthday cake.

He spent some time in his garden, more time in his laboratory, read with pleasure telegrams from Edison, Firestone and other old friends and attended to business.

IF YOU ARE getting on toward 40 and inclined to be discouraged, think of Henry Ford, who was past 40 when he emerged from obscurity and made enough automobiles to carry all the people in the United States at one time.

YOUNG PEOPLE who think they are not appreciated might remember that Henry Ford as a youth took a job in a machine shop at $2 a week, and because he couldn't live on that took another job to work at night in a jewelry store for $1 a week, and as he said, "with $3 a week" he had money enough.

It can be done if you have it in you, now as a thousand years ago.

EVERY AMERICAN and hundreds of millions of others will wish for Henry Ford at least 100 years of life, partly for his sake but more for the sake of the country.

Mr. Ford has paid out in high wages, not merely millions, or hundreds of millions, but THOUSANDS OF MILLIONS OF DOLLARS.

And he has had on his payroll, at one time, an army of more than 200,000. Compare that army of peace and production with armies organized for slaughter, in the sort of war that we are now paying for with our gloom and depression.

HINGTON'S PUBLIC service, having used 500 tween 20 and 34 years subjects, discovers that in ways, a little man better than a big man. o big, or too little, is a tage, except, of course, king, and that kind of is not popular.

TAXI BURNED BY HILLTOP RIOTERS

Shots Fired as Mob Seizes Cab; Driver Arrested On Gun-Carrying Charge

Several shots were fired during a taxicab strike riot in Mt. Oliver early today when a cab driver was attacked by a mob at Giffin avenue and Brownsville road.

Forcing the driver to flee, the mob took possession of the abandoned cab and drove it into a ravine at Onyx and Transverse avenues where oil and gasoline were poured upon it and a match applied. It burned with an estimated loss of $2,600, according to Fire Chief Elmer Smith of Mt. Oliver.

DRIVER ARRESTED

The driver of the cab, Ralph Te[illegible], 25, of Fourth street, Oak[illegible], was arrested on the second floor of the Giffin apartments near the scene of the riot. He was armed, police said, with a 45 caliber automatic revolver. He admitted firing four of five shots, police said. A charge of being a suspicious person was lodged against him.

The raid attracted a crowd of between 300 and 500, several of whom said at least half a dozen shots were fired. F. F. Aul, of 211 Giffin avenue, near whose home most of the action took place, said seven or eight shots were fired.

FOUR ARRESTS DUE

Four arrests were expected today in connection with a raid of the union taxicab drivers' offices, 527 Fifth avenue, Thursday morning, according to Justice of the Peace J. M. O'Rourke, of Broughton.

The raiders were alleged to have torn down a banner proclaiming the strike was "still on" and "bigger and better."

Informations against the four charging malicious mischief were sworn out before O'Rourke yesterday. The charges were sworn to by S. A. Richards, union committee member.

FURNISH BONDS

Some of the same defendants were among eight men who waived hearings before O'Rourke yesterday on charges of participating in a raid on the union headquarters last Sunday morning, breaking windows and throwing office furniture into the street.

The eight, against whom 13 charges had been made, furnished bail bonds which totaled $24,500. The Parmelee Transportation Company furnished the bonds, O'Rourke said.

A banner similar to the one torn down was placed yesterday over the union office windows. M. J. Burns said 688 men had checked in there yesterday and renewed their declaration that they would not return to work until their demands, including recognition of the union, were met.

QUIZ POLICE ON TOWING 'GRAFT'

Clark Warns All Officers As Garage Owner Tells Of Demands for Fees

Investigation of charges that motorcycle policemen are collecting commission for automobiles towed to city concession garages for traffic law violations, was started today by Director of Public Safety James M. Clark.

Owners of the six "concession" garages to which all impounded cars are towed and two motorcycle officers were called before Clark.

The policemen were Lieut. Robert Buel and Patrolman William Bruce, who frequently serves as an acting lieutenant.

ADMIT GIVING 'PRESENTS'

Both denied they had ever received such commissions or had ever asked for them.

Two of the garage owners, Clark said, admitted they had given occasional "presents" to motorcycle policemen.

They were told, the director said, to discontinue the practice or their concession would be revoked.

Traffic Inspector Jacob Dorsey accompanied Buel and Bruce to Clark's office. He was told to warn all his officers at roll call today that any presents of money received from concession garage owners would result in immediate suspension when discovered.

SHAKEDOWN CHARGED

The investigation is said to have started on complaint of the owner of the Iroquois Garage, 235 Meyran avenue, who is reported to have complained of the "shakedown" to Inspector James Hoey of Oakland Station.

Clark was informed that motorcycle officers have obtained or sought to obtain $1 for each car towed to the concession garages. According to the report given him, 50 cents of this was supposed to go to the officers ordering the car impounded and 50 cents to a higher-up.

Motorists are charged varying fees to recover their machines once they have been towed to the concession garages. In the Iroquois it is $4.75.

American Pilots On World Flight Down in Russia

MOSCOW, Aug. 1—(AP.)—Civil aviation authorities were advised today that Clyde Pangborn and Hugh Herndon, Jr., round-the-world fliers, made a forced landing today at Jietiegari, in the Cossack autonomous republic.

They came down at 8:30 a. m. Moscow time (1:30 p. m. Friday daylight saving time), the message said.

Officials here telegraphed representatives of the Civil Aviation Society in that vicinity to give the fliers all possible assistance.

They have been advised by telegram to take off with a small quantity of fuel and fly to Kustanaisk or Omsk, about 450 miles away.

The town of Kustanaisk is a little more than 1,000 miles from Moscow and about 425 miles southwest of Omsk. It is some distance to the south of the Trans-Siberian Railway line, about midway between Omsk and Ekaterinburg.

LEFT MOSCOW AT 5:20 P. M.

It is about 1,700 miles west of Irkutsk, which the fliers had hoped to make their first stop after leaving Moscow.

They got away from Moscow at 5:20 p. m. yesterday and intended to stop only at Irkutsk and Khabarovsk before attempting a non-stop hop across the Sea of Okhotsk and the Bering Sea to Nome, whence they planned a non-stop flight over the last leg to New York.

They were approximately 10 hours behind the Post-Gatty round-the-world mark at Moscow, but with fewer and shorter stops they hope to reduce their disadvantage.

Herndon and Pangborn announced that due to the delay in reaching Moscow they had decided to cut out their scheduled visit to Tokio and attempt to reach New York in three more hops. They planned to fly the 3,822 miles from Nome to New York without stopping.

KING AND QUEEN ESCAPE BOMB

GENOA, Italy, Aug. 1—(AP.)—A bomb exploded in a street in the heart of the business section today a few hours before King Victor Emanuel and Queen Elena arrived for the launching of the ocean liner Rex.

It shattered windows. A panic ensued.

The city was subjected to a kind of martial law immediately after the explosion. Hundreds were arrested. When the King and Queen arrived, the train yards were placed under guard. Their majesties hurried to the ship-launching ceremony and, in the presence of a cheering throng, the liner slid into the water.

After the ceremony the King and Queen dedicated the new sailors' home. Then, instead of going into the city, they had lunch on their train, intending to leave immediately for their summer residence.

The bomb was planted in front of the Italian Transatlantic Society Building, where most of the damage was done.

Adjoining the building are two hotels, in one of which Under Secretary of State Allieri was staying.

This was the fourth bomb explosion in Genoa in recent weeks. A consignment of fountain pens, loaded with explosives and addressed to the Fascist Party Headquarters, was delivered several days ago.

MEDIA, Pa., Aug. 1.—(AP.)—The Glen Mills road ghost, which has been creating quite a bit of excitement this week, almost went professional last night. State police kept it an amateur.

More than 2,000 persons thronged the road where for the past 10 days Media merchants and farmers have reported they saw an apparition which laughed and flitted to an orchard where two years ago a murderer hanged himself.

Last night farmers of the locality put up hot dog, ice cream and lemonade stands. Signs announcing "Parking, 25 cents," were numerous. It looked like a big night for the farmers' pocketbooks.

State police however blocked off the roads at intersections near the farm where the phantom has been reported. Sightseers from Delaware and surrounding counties were detoured over other routes.

So the hot dogs grew cold and the ice cream melted and ran.

COURT POLITICS ASSAILED

Charging that the influence of politics upon the courts is "diabolical," Attorney H. H. Negley, candidate for Common Pleas Court, last night urged members of the Citizens Committee of McKees Rocks, a political reform organization, to free themselves of the shackles of machine politics.

Negley spoke in the committee headquarters at 293 Broadway and said conditions in the Allegheny County Courthouse are just as bad as they are in the borough building in McKees Rocks. He revealed that the Allegheny County Commissioners in the last 42 months had spent $107,000,000, which he declared was "an outrageous shame and a crime at a time like this, when earnings of taxpayers are reduced." Negley said the voting machine situation was a "gigantic conspiracy."

SHOOTING STILL MYSTERY

The mysterious shooting of Fred R. Vance, 31, of 527 North Negley avenue, as he stood beside a policeman at Meadow street and Larimer avenue, early Wednesday remained unsolved after a brief hearing in East End Police Court today.

Vance, who had been wounded in the hand and leg, was discharged from the Pittsburgh Hospital yesterday. Today Magistrate Charles Papale asked him "Do you know who shot you?"

Vance replied, "I'm not sure."

Papale ordered the hearing continued. Frank M. White, 26, of 605 Larimer avenue, alleged by police to have done the shooting, his wife, Thelma, 25, of 621 Larimer avenue, Clarence R. Coates, 21, of Youngwood, Pa., a material witness, and Patrolman Harvey Connors, with Vance when he was shot, were present but were not called on to testify.

Germany Raises Rediscount Rate

CAPONE FREED UNDER BAIL

CHICAGO, Aug. 1 —(INS)— Al Capone's hopes for a "soft" penalty for all his crimes were dashed against the firm stand of Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson, but today the "big shot" of all gangsters was free on $50,000 bail where two days ago he expected to be on his way to Leavenworth by this time.

Capone's comparative freedom bid fair to last several months or more than a year as a complicated and long legal battle loomed following Judge Wilkerson's surprise actions.

Continuing his unexpected procedure, Judge Wilkerson yesterday ordered that the charge of liquor conspiracy against Capone be revised so as to call for a stiffer sentence, and agreed to Capone's motion to withdraw his plea of guilty to income tax evasion and set the case for call September 8.

It was plainly the attitude of the court that Capone must expect the most severe punishment possible and that no "bargaining" was to be countenanced.

Capone Chauffeur Held on Dope Charge

ST. PAUL, Minn., Aug. 1. —(AP.)—The St. Paul Dispatch in a copyrighted article quotes Col. J. F. Coupal, former White House physician, as saying Calvin Coolidge did not intend to remove himself unconditionally from the presidential field when he issued his "I do not choose to run" statement.

Instead, Col. Coupal said, he merely wished, in compliance with his sense of justice, to cast aside any advantage his position might give and permit the people to choose another man if they preferred. He added:

LAYMEN CALLED TO AID HOME REBUILDING

Relief Plans Pushed After Priests Subscribe $30,000; 45th Victim of Fire Dies

Several thousand Catholic laymen, representing the 450 parishes of the Pittsburgh diocese, today were summoned to a meeting to be held tomorrow afternoon in Synod Hall, Craig street, at which further plans will be made for the relief campaign for the Little Sisters of the Poor, whose home in Penn avenue was swept by fire last week.

With the death in St. Francis Hospital late last night of Patrick Patterson, one of the inmates of the home, the number of dead reached 45. Patterson's death was attributed to pneumonia and shock.

The Rt. Rev. Hugh C. Boyle, bishop of the Pittsburgh diocese, announced the campaign meeting late yesterday following a gathering of priests from the various parishes at which $30,000 was pledged toward the fund.

SOLICITORS NAMED

Priests promised the money after naming 10 of their number as members of a committee to conduct general solicitation throughout the parishes. The objective of the campaign is to raise sufficient money to replace the old home, or rebuild it.

The General Campaign Committee, of which the parish solicitation group is a part, is rapidly being organized under the leadership of J. Rogers Flannery, chairman, and J. Dawson Callery, treasurer.

The Very Rev. John P. Gallagher of St. Raphael's Church was named chairman of the committee, the Rev. Ralph L. Hayes, of St. Catherine's, Beechview, secretary, and Father E. Lawrence O'Connell, of Epiphany Church, treasurer.

DRIVE DATES SET

Other members of the committee are Fathers Leonard Stenger, St. Basil's; Thomas F. Coakley, Sacred Heart; Clement Hrtaneck, St. Ann's, Homestead; Thomas Rea, St. Mary's of the Mount; Sigmund Kratz, O. M. Cap., F. D. Francesco, Mother of Good Counsel Church, and S. Slewinski, Holy Family.

The campaign will be conducted throughout the district from August 16 to August 23. The amount needed will be determined by the results of an examination of the ruins by a committee of experts. If practicable the old buildings will be rebuilt and modern fireproofing devices installed.

The bodies of eight unclaimed victims of the disaster will be buried Monday morning in Calvary Cemetery following solemn requiem high mass in St. Paul's Cathedral, it was announced. The bodies of Daniel O'Shea, Anna Carroll, Patrick Lannahan, Lorina Marinera, James Dekouria, Clara Lenz, Ellen Callahan and Hugh McAvoy will be removed from the morgue in charge of eight Pittsburgh undertakers under the direction of James J. Flannery.

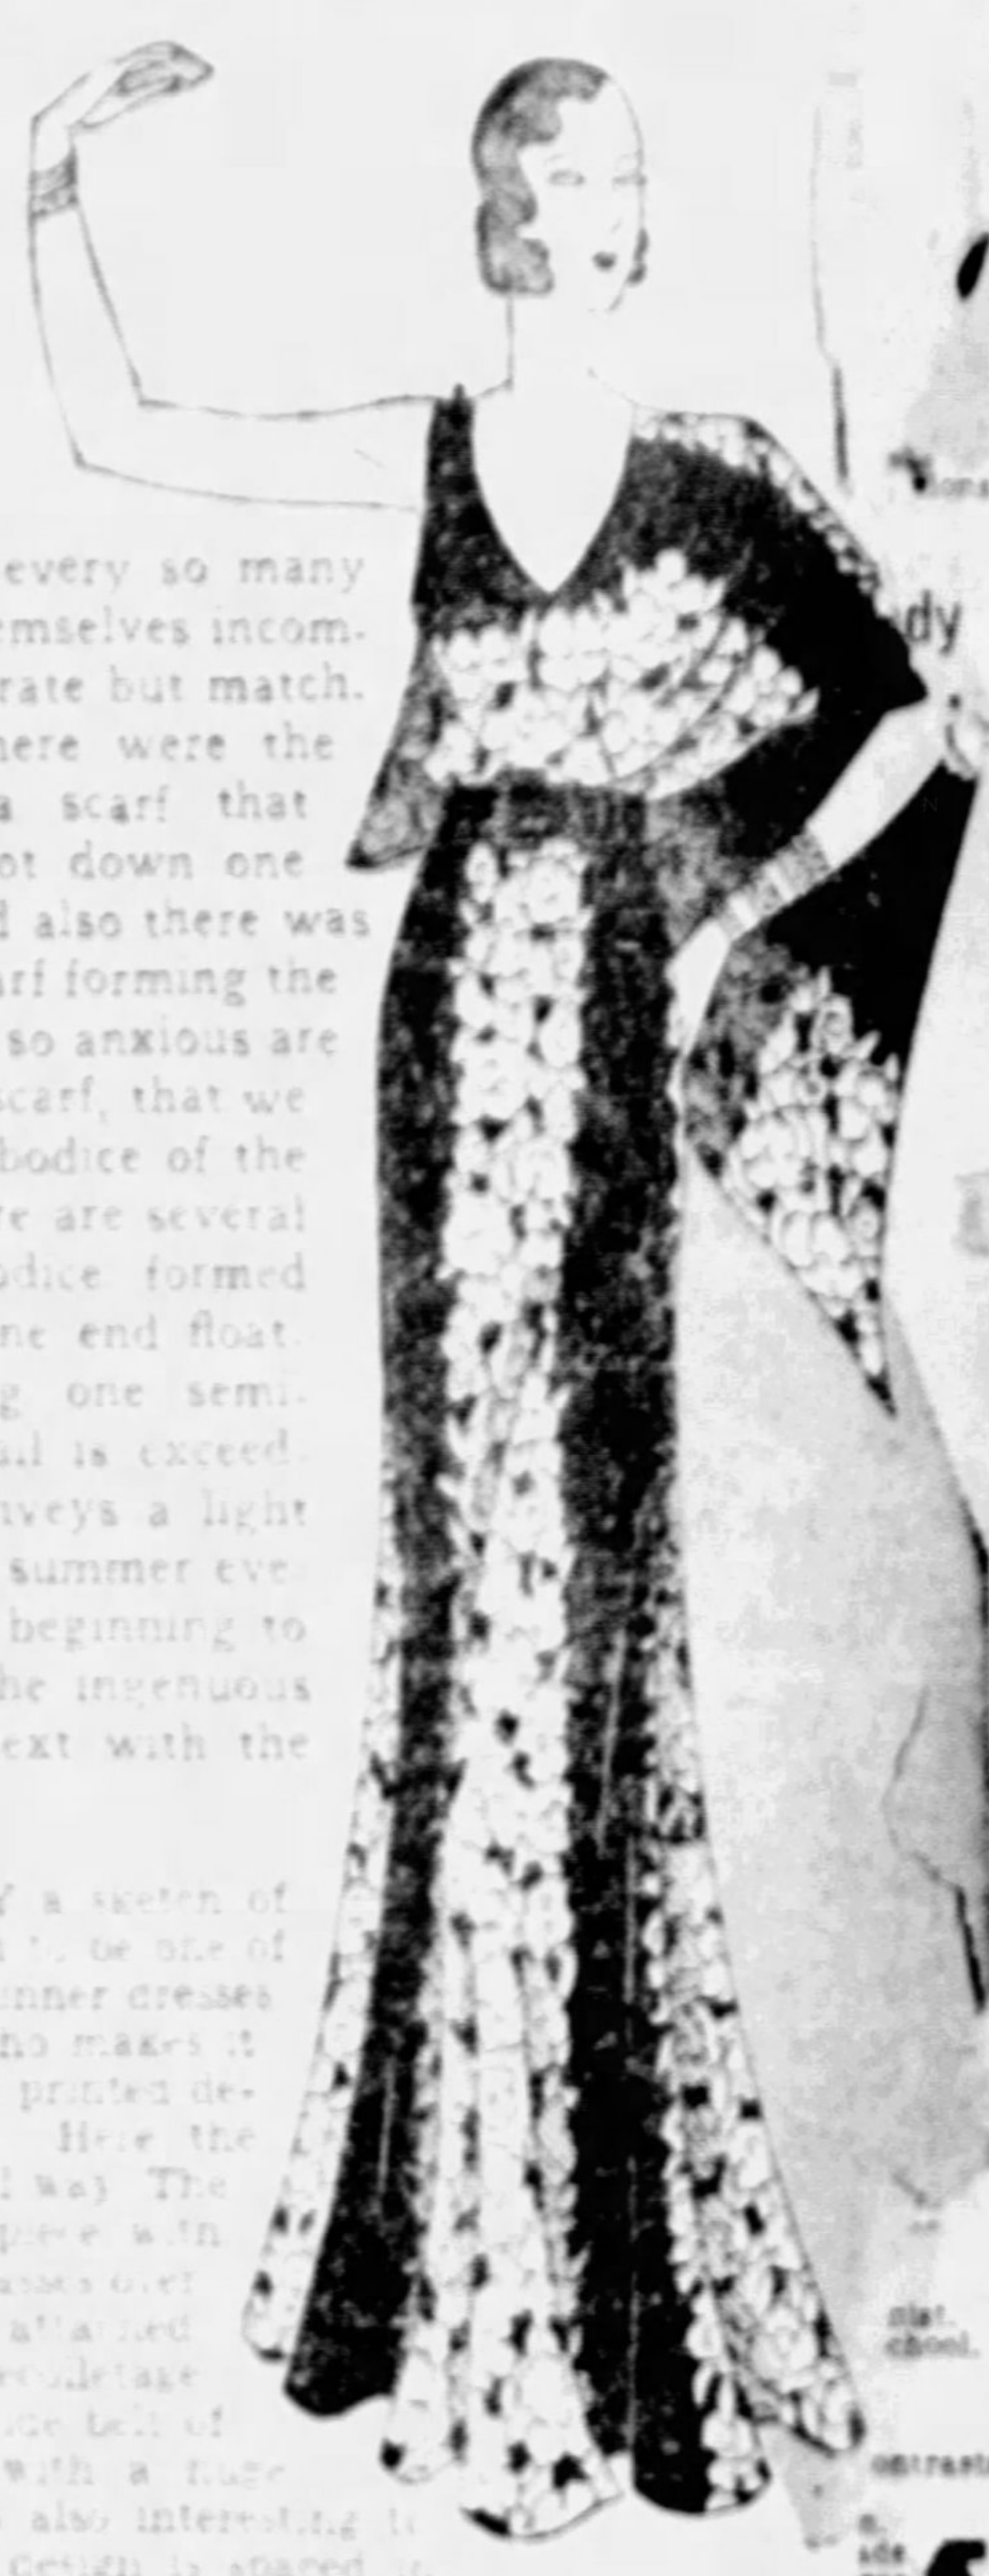
NEW NOVEL WAY OF EMPLOYING SCARVES

—Sketched in Paris—



Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh
Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Aug. 1.—More and more does the scarf tie up with the mode. Earlier in the season, we found that every so many frocks considered themselves incomplete without a separate but matching scarf. Then there were the frocks that used a scarf that terminated in a jabot down one side of the frock, and also there was the frock with the scarf forming the neckline. And now, so anxious are we not to loose the scarf, that we use it to create the bodice of the evening frock. There are several frocks with the bodice formed from a scarf with one end floating free or forming one semi-sleeve. Such a detail is exceedingly smart and conveys a light and lissome air to a summer evening frock. We are beginning to wonder just what the ingenuous designers will do next with the scarf.

* * *

WE SHOW TODAY a sketch of what is rightly reputed to be one of the season's smartest dinner dresses. It is by Irene Dana who makes it of black chiffon with a printed design of white flowers. Here the scarf is used in a novel way. The bodice is cut on one piece with the wide scarf which passes over one arm and is then attached to the deep V shaped decolletage at back. There is a wide belt of black patent leather with a huge buckle in strass. It is also interesting to note how the printed design is spaced in conjunction with the solid strips of black.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Aug. 1.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

That was funny in Chicago—a judge not knowing anything about the U. S. government having a special treaty with Al Capone to let him off easy. This backwoods judge was trying to treat him like a criminal. Now the whole thing has got to go to court and he will win and perhaps sue the government for defamation of character.

Marie, Polly Bring Fun To Penn

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

The Lysistrata theme has reached the screen, Penn screen to be exact. Perhaps Aristophanes robbed his plot for Lysistrata from some earlier writer. Anyway, it is certain that someone robbed the same plot from Aristophanes as the basis of action of "Politics," which serves Marie Dressler and Polly Moran for a screamingly funny film comedy.

Like "Lysistrata" it is centered in a strike of women not to terminate war but to end vice and crime by electing Miss Dressler mayor. It is uproariously farcical, but it has its little heart-throbs.

MAYOR IS HECKLED

Miss Moran, who is interested in politics because [illegible] Miss Dressler's campaign manager after the women put her up as their candidate when she heckles the mayor on the speakeasy situation which has resulted in a murder of a young girl. The crime is closer to home than she thinks it is and has an effect on the outcome of the election. There is just enough seriousness to the story to make the action of the women appear logical. As for the rest it is nonsense, howlingly funny.

ATES STUTTERS, TOO

Folks evidently know what to expect from this pair for the house was crowded for the opening show. But funny as they are they are not the whole of the comedy. There is Mr. Polly Moran, otherwise Roscoe Ates, stuttering barber whose customers blame him for not putting his foot down and stopping his wife from mixing in politics. "Pu-pu-put your own foot down," he responds.

On the stage Bert Frohman appears as master of ceremony in a show, "Exit Smiling," which features the Arnaut Brothers, who perform clownish acrobatics while playing violins. It is a kind of dancing show, the other acts being a couple of eccentric stepping boys and a cute lassie who does a contortionistic dance. Dick Liebert conducts a singing school.

Plays, Players and By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Film Row, as the Pittsburgh center of the distribution of motion pictures to exhibitors is known, is going to find the work of the new board of film censorship much more satisfactory from an exhibitor's standpoint than that of the old board. Fewer and smaller cuts are being made and it is felt that the censors are using common sense in their censorship. Pennsylvania has long been regarded as the toughest state of all by the makers of photoplays. Many films shown elsewhere have failed altogether in making the grade in this state, but it seems a more reasonable position is taken by the new board.

Small Timer says he has equipped his flivver with radio tubes so he can get "distance."

Irving Pichel, Pittsburgh boy who went to California a few years ago to become director of the Pasadena Community Playhouse and has recently become a photoplay actor, has been engaged to play the male lead opposite Tallulah Bankhead in her next picture, "The Cheat," which will be filmed in the East.

Small Timer says it has been some years since he began a "promising" career and he insists that he is still willing to promise a creditor anything.

When "Murders in the Rue Morgue," Edgar Allen Poe's horror tales, are filmed, the leading role will be played by Bela Lugosi, the vampire man of the stage play "Dracula," who has made a screen appearance of [illegible].

A Columnist's Sec'y Jots Down a Few Notes

Dear W. W.: Mr. Ziegfeld just phoned . . . To say that the "Follies" extra matinee on Aug. 11, in memory of Helen Walsh, is going along fine, already . . . The stage hands, musicians and other attaches, besides the "Follies" cast, of course, will work sans wages, so that no expenses will be deducted and the gross will go to Helen's mother. Mr. Ziegfeld says the "take" should be at least $4,500. Harry Richman will turn over the insurance to her mother, too . . . And what with this fellow and that sportsman phoning you all day to say that they each will buy at least $100 worth of tickets, the proceeds should be very heavy . . . It would be a good idea, also, to remind your readers and those playgoers who haven't seen the "Follies" that the Ziegfeld Theater is the coolest playhouse in the world . . . So here's a sell-out! . . . The committee in charge of the benefit includes the Mayor, who will serve as chairman; Mr. Ziegfeld, Gene Buck, William Moore, Harry Richman, Mark and yourself . . . Rene Racover, who started that idea about the American Mayors going to Europe, is planning to bring 100 newspapermen to Paris as guests of the Frenchies . . . Wanted to know if you would come along . . . I said I was sure you wouldn't be able . . . Theater Mag plans to resume in the fall, I hear . . . Two newspaper women from the Dallas News were in . . . A Mr. Dwyer of the Times wants to know what the radio people intend doing to the press by way of reprisal . . . Music lovers might be interested in learning that the music library at the Capitol Theater is valued at over $300,000 . . . Philly papers want to know more about that fraud action to be brought against city officials . . . Shall I tell them?

That simile you used a few days ago, "Busy as a xylophone player two bars behind," contributed by M. B. J. (whoever he is), was thefted from Ted Cook, so clear yourself . . . Also the gag about wages of sin being steady, which the Morntelly boxed on page 1 as reported from Hollywood, was lifted from Judge and was authored by David Murray . . . I see the line you had about Mayor Walker planning to go to Germany was confirmed in the other [illegible] . . . And that Miss Barrymore is acting up again . . . And gave one of "those" not-so-well known performances in the West, but which you knew all along! . . . Your daughter Walda just phoned to tell you to be sure and buy some money as she saw a present she would like to get for you . . . Phil Baker dropped in. He's sailing Saturday . . . Did you know that "Huckleberry Finn" was once barred for children in a Brooklyn library because its slang was "obnoxious"? . . . And they kill time!

When you see Clifton Webb tell him there's a barber in the Greeley Arcade who looks just like him . . . Georgia Sands says her little daughter Dorothy became a bride on July 17. Imagine! . . . Did you know, too, that when it rains motorcycle cops won't chase you for speeding? . . . Too risky, they can't control the cycle . . . Also the reason most of the lunchrooms do not permit ciggie smoking is to get the patrons out as soon as possible to make room for new diners . . . They sell cigarets in them, however! . . . Noel Pierce called . . . Wasn't she once one of your pet poets? . . . Here's something you never knew: that the newest fleet of rum-runners, all 3,200 horsepower, are radio shielded so that the Coast Guard boats can't pick up the ignition spark! . . . You might query this: How much did the retirement of the Dutch aircraft engineer Plotz have to do with the split between General Motors and Fokker? . . . That'll start something.

Understand that Roger Wolfe Kahn is shelving America and has bought a house in London, which the Mrs.—that cheerful little earful girl—furnished with stuff from Paree . . . One of the boys is calling it "Brokeway." . . . There are two children, one six and the other four, of Cleveland, who will be famous soon . . . They jump out of balloons with parachutes already! . . . Clarke says to tell you that the Post-Gatty 'round the world record won't be broken for at least a year . . . Manya Roberti, whom you keep referring to as Lyda's kid sister, is two years older than Lyda . . . Manya was married to Russel Diebert, a musician, while in Shanghai, China, and has a daughter 6, and was divorced from Diebert about six months ago . . . The Press Club in Washington, I understand, is trying to blame "Washington Merry-Go-Round" on George Abel . . . On the grounds that it was written by a smart Aleck, which Abel is alleged to be.

That story about the chorus boy and chorus girl in "The New Yorkers" show, which you columnists helped, because he had lost the only money they had and a baby was coming, has turned out peaches . . . The stork arrived successfully in San Francisco and all are well and happy . . . That lovely Louise Brooks girl, who was here recently and posed at Atlantic Beach with Mr. Walker, is the daughter of the present Mrs. Lionel Atwill, or did you know that? . . . Is it true that "Jimmy" is ailing more than a lotta people think? . . . That line about Wanda Stevenson disappearing has another side to it . . . I don't know if she returned to her parents yet, but I do know she was being courted by a guy who was supposed to be in the money—and he simply isn't! . . . Carroll, by the way, is hiring the same girls he used in his "Vanities" of five years ago . . . Did you know that Princess Ileana, who became a bride the other day, was wooed while here by Lieut. William J. Glasgow, her guide? . . . He's a New Yorker and is now stationed with the 15th Infantry at Chinwangtao, China, trying to Forget The Incident, as one always says when one really can't!

I looked up the first report on the Tibbetts telling it to a judge and found it in the column as far back as December . . . I really had forgotten it . . . If you'd make a hit with a lot of sufferers, then tell them that a dab with a drop of ammonia immediately takes the sting out of mosquito bites . . . Morton Downey, I hear, has more gold badges for singing at police benefits and press passes than anybody, but his car won't go fast! . . . What luck! . . . On the other hand, look at all the red lights he can whizz by, huh? . . . I don't quite understand why they are panning Broun that way in the theatrical papers . . . What did he ever do to anybody? . . . I see they've run the gangsters out of the night clubs and have sent them back to the streets where it is easier to kill babies with machine guns . . . Before Russell Boardman took off for Turkey the other day someone thefted his helmet, so he borrowed Teddy Stuart's, the flying reporter . . . Since Russ landed safely at Istanbul that helmet is now worth $50 . . . When the King of Siam was scheduled to visit this country, the station at Scarborough was freshly painted, but only on one side! . . . This is the station for the Whitelaw Reid estate . . . Well, when the locals heard that the King was leaving the other day, they had to scurry around and get the other side painted! . . . By all means tell Mr. Wilstach about the grand simile in Judge—as dizzy as a Scot after dropping a dime in a revolving door!—R. C.

Richard Dix Stanley Star

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

"The Public Defender," with Richard Dix, opened yesterday on the Stanley screen. It is all about a dapper and bold young gentleman who takes the law in his own hands and traps the men who sent his sweetheart's father to ruin.

In the film Dix is known as "the Reckoner." He goes prowling about in wealthy homes, leaving ominous calling cards that warn "beware" and have a sketch of what we suppose is the scale of justice scribbled over them. He's punctual at his calling, too. If he says he'll be there at 8 o'clock, he'll be there, even if the place is overrun with police.

AVENGING HERO

The picture has murder excitement and comedy. And, of course, there's romance. Mr. Dix wins the girl in the finale.

The story opens with the failure of a big banking institution and the blame is placed on an innocent man. This man happens to be the girl's father and this fact sends Mr. Dix into his avenging antics.

Supporting players include Shirley Grey, Edmund Breese and Boris Karloff.

AND ORANGE TREES

Johnny Perkins, rotund comedian, is continuing on the stage for a second week, the new show being "California Capers." The band sits among the orange trees and Dick Powell takes it through his version of "Minnie, the Moocher." The Kelo Brothers get a hand with their stepping. Other entertainers include the Brightons, the Wheeler Twins and the Evans-Bines Girls. There is an overture by Broudy and a well conceived organlogue by Armstrong.

WIFE CHARGED WITH CRUELTY

His wife came home in the early morning hours two or three times a week and told him she would keep it up until he tired of marriage, Elmer J. Morris, 721 Sandusky street, averred in his divorce suit against Marie Martin Morris, 1019 Galveston avenue, in Common Pleas Court.

He said his wife used boisterous language on the street to embarrass him and she would often scream at home to give the impression he was mistreating her.

They were married January 21, 1926, and Morris said he left her after she threw a milk bottle at him. He charged cruelty and indignities.

Roscoe L. Hamer, of 620 Main street, Coraopolis, asked a divorce from Irene Mae Hamer, of Coraopolis, in Common Pleas Court, alleging cruelty and indignities. They were married May 7, 1923, and parted July 9, 1931.

New York Tough; Presents Loving Cups for Murders

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Mayor Walker orders New York police to shoot to kill.

So far the cops have only been shooting for cigars.

Jimmy doesn't want any more of that embroidery work. All of the police are good marksmen and pride themselves on their ability to give you the once-over-lightly and touch-up-the-side-a-bit.

But since the mobbisters have started killing babies Jimmy wants results. A gunman may intimidate a jury but he cannot scare a coroner.

We have heard a lot of talk about the West where men are men. Well, they don't ride side-saddle in New York, either.

If the Wild Bills and Poison Jakes of Arizona want some excitement they'd better hop the next school teachers excursion for the East.

Why, Chicago is only a prep school. When Horace Greeley told young men to go West he only meant the tenors.

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

"MARY CLARK was a vaudevillian with a future," writes Joe Moran. "And so was Johnny Hill. But, in addition to a future, he also had a past. They met, oddly enough, across the footlights. Johnny, a personable young hoofer, doing a single, was laying off the last half of the week in an up-state New York town. Knowing two of the boys in an act that was coming in for that part of the week, Johnny stayed over to see them. And while he was catching the show from out front he saw Mary.

"Never had Johnny's breath been more completely taken away. Mary had the sort of figure that makes impressionists out of young artists—one look at it and they turn to a less exacting medium. Because they know full well that they can never hope to duplicate such perfection. She was only a magician's helper, but she had more magic in her eyes than the professor had in his entire act.

"Even had this bozo been a mediocre magician, no one would have been able to detect exactly how he did his tricks. For the simple reason that nobody bothered to watch him. They had eyes only for Mary. When she appeared in her abbreviated costume, disappeared from a large box and reappeared smilingly in a glass tank filled with water, every one in the audience appeared to have a personal interest in her reappearance.

"The night that Johnny sat out front, he immediately forgot that he was there to catch his friends' act. And at the conclusion of the magician's act he arose from his seat and rushed from the theater. A minute later he was standing in the dressing room of his pals.

"'Listen, boys,' he cried. 'I want an introduction to that girl who just came off. You know, the one that helps that bum magician.'

"This was something new to them. Never before had Johnny been known to request an introduction to a dame. No, indeed. Johnny wasn't that kind of a guy.

"'Introduce yourself,' was what they told him, 'the same as you've always done. Why should we—'

"'Not this time,' he told them. 'This is different.'

"If it hadn't been for the fact that one of his friends was acquainted with Mary, I don't imagine Johnny would have ever met her. But coincidences happen. And this was one of them. So in less time than it takes to tell, Johnny and Mary were clasping hands.

"'Johnny Hill? O, yes! I remember you now. I caught your act at the Palace. Your routines were marvelous. Why, it was weeks before I got over it.'

"And the touch of her hand made Johnny Hill's spine the runway for the most delicious thrills he had ever experienced. . . .

"Three months later, Mark, they were married. And Mary became a part of Johnny's act. And the team of Hill & Hill became more popular than Hill could ever dream of becoming with his single. And now that they were doing so well, Johnny decided that he could well afford to buy things that he thought would make Mary happy.

"But Mary was happy and would remain so without jewels and expensive clothes. However, she loved him all the more for the manner in which he displayed his affection. And while she often chided him for his lavishness, she knew full well that it was useless for her to say too much.

"So they continued to be headlined. Mary continued to love Johnny. And Johnny continued to squander every penny of his split of their salary. Every good thing has an ending, however. And theirs came quite suddenly.

"It happened one night while they were going through their routine. Mary was running from the stage, the applause of the crowd ringing in her ears, when she stumbled over a chair in the wings. No one thought her injury serious at that time. But after a few weeks under a doctor's care, Johnny was given the news.

"'Mary would be a cripple for life.' Paralysis, the doctor said. And Johnny was heart-broken. They had a heart-to-heart talk after the doctor left the house. And they both agreed on one thing. Johnny would again get booking as a single. He'd work hard. He'd save every penny possible until he was able to show Mary a bank account of $20,000. They would then convert that amount into first mortgages, buy a little place in the country, and take things easy for the rest of their lives.

"Like so many men, Mark, that are hit by a sweeping reform, Johnny became as close with his money as he had formerly been lavish. Every cent he could possibly spare went toward his twenty grand. Gradually his friends drifted away from him. He was getting stingy, you see. And he found it increasingly difficult to get attractive bookings. He compensated himself for this, however, by the thought that he was doing it for Mary.

"He took whatever booking he could get, just so that he could keep working in order to keep saving. Both of them were depriving themselves of the smallest luxuries, for by this time the twenty grand had become an obsession with them.

"They were both crazy about children. And would have loved to have had the comfort of a tot's warm arms around their necks. But children are expensive. Therefore they remained childless. And kept plodding on. And on. And on. They would reach their goal some day. And then all their worries would be at an end.

"After years of struggling they finally had their $20,000. And if ever you saw a happy pair, that pair was Johnny and Mary. With double sighs of relief that would have done justice to a pair of newly escaped convicts they retired to that modest little home in the country.

"'Let the suckers laugh now, eh, Mary?' Johnny boasted. 'We've got ours, haven't we, honey? And while it was tough getting it, it's worth everything to know that from now on we're fixed.'

"'It certainly was tough, dear,' she told him. 'And I'd hate to have to go through it again. But it's all over now. And we're happier than we've been in quite a few years.'

"So they settled down to an old age of provided and secure happiness. They had no children. They had no friends. All they had was each other. And their '20 grand.'

"About a week after they had gone to the country a letter reached them from a firm of well-known lawyers. It was a short letter, Mark, and very much to the point. What it meant to the two people who received it, I have no way of knowing. Suppose I merely give it to you and let you judge for yourself? Here it is:

"'Dear Mr. Hill: Mr. Morrison, a client of ours, died recently, leaving no heirs. He instructed us in his will to turn over to you, his best friend, his entire estate. If you will drop into our office upon receipt of this letter, necessary arrangements will be made for the transfer of the estate.

"'After all debts have been paid, we believe the value of the estate will amount to about $20,000.'"

FINANCIAL NEWS AND VIEWS

TRANSPARENT WRAPPING

The varied uses and growing potentialities of transparent wrapping paper are attracting greater attention on the part of the European paper industry which is now developing a number of paper impregnating processes with the object of maximum transparency in view. European trade leaders have advised the Commerce Department that the advantages of transparency in wrapping materials have always been obvious but never to such an extent as with the development of transparent cellulose sheeting. Because of the investment necessary in its manufacture and possible patent infringement litigation there have been comparatively few competitive developments except in cheaper imitations.

UTILITY EXPANDS

New steam and hydro-electric generating units involving additional capacities of more than 135,000 kilowatts for subsidiaries and controlled companies were announced by Utilities Power and Light Corporation. Among the improvements are a new steam-electric generating station at Indianapolis, an additional unit in the Dubuque, Ia., steam-electric station, a new steam-electric station at Maccan, Nova Scotia, a new steam-electric unit at Mound street, St. Louis, a new steam-electric unit at Catalin street, St. Louis, a new hydro-electric generating station at Lebanon, Mo., and a new steam-electric unit at Harvey, N. D.

MOTOR MARKET

A vast potential field for commercial motor transport development is seen by the Commerce Department in South America. A three fold growth during the last five years in the truck and bus registration there presents one of the most promising aspects of the future for the American automotive industry which has even during the depressed conditions of the last two years supplied 90 to 95 per cent of the total.

ALUMINUM TANK CARS

Tank cars made of aluminum are being developed by General American Tank Car Corporation for shipment of acetic acid, glacial formaldehyde and liquids which must be kept in a water-white state and free of steel contamination while in transit. Each car has a capacity of 8,000 gallons.

CURTIS-WRIGHT SELLS RIGHTS

The Argentine government has acquired manufacturing rights to the complete line of Curtiss-Wright Export Corporation. The agreement calls for a minimum of 250 engines in the next five years and includes the purchase of 25 engines and a large quantity of spare parts to be shipped from the United States.

VISIBLE COFFEE

The world's visible supply of coffee declined about 400,000 bags in June, the New York Coffee and Sugar Exchange reports. The total visible supply July 1 amounted to 26,020,194 bags, compared with 26,428,010 bags as of June 1, and 23,309,133 bags as of July 1, 1930.

Blaw Knox Holds Steady On Dividend Reduction; Pittsburgh Plate Down

Trading continued quiet on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange in the short week-end session today with prices showing an irregular trend. Blaw Knox held steady in the face of the dividend reduction indicating that the action had been discounted by the previous recession in the share.

Harbison-Walker recovered part of the loss suffered earlier in the week, selling up to 26¼ as against the previous close at 25. Only a little of the stock changed hands and there was no supply at the 25 level to which it dropped at mid-week.

Pittsburgh Plate Glass was down a point at 34. The decline was somewhat surprising in view of the fact that announcement was made only Thursday that the company had received the award for the window glass in the Radio City group of buildings in New York.

OLD METHODS HOLDING BACK RAILROADS

Archaic Competitive System Retarding Inauguration Of Necessary Economies

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—Archaic, legally ordained methods of competition are deterring the railroads from inaugurating all the sound economies feasible to improve their financial status, according to Paul Shoup, president of the Southern Pacific.

In view of the recent petition for a 15 per cent freight rate increase by the carriers the p[illegible] lic, which [illegible] pay the [illegible] should be keenly interested in [illegible] barriers to the elimination of economic waste which tend to make all of us poorer.

TRADE SURVEY PLANNED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—Every trade association executive is urged by Frederic M. Feiker, director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce to inventory the activities of his organization in terms of the present problems of business and relate those activities when they are unrelated to the present problems.

He urges also that the executives inventory the work of their fellow associates to see whether it is possible in the experience of one group to find an answer to the problem in another.

The associations are asked to unite in a common platform, together with the government, in establishing, first, a larger conception of what has already been accomplished by organized co-operative efforts of trade and industry with the government in the field of national planning, and second, in carrying through in terms of action in terms of trade and industrial groups headed by men of action the economic planning that is essential if we are to find not only the immediate answer to our problems but if we are to lay the foundation of future prosperous America.

Economic planning, he pointed out, supposes the creative thinking and planning of individual businessmen guided by a co-ordinated program of major problems.

Nickel Expected to Cut Dividend Basis at Monday's Meeting

International Nickel Company of Canada earned roughly $1,700,000 in the second quarter after depreciation, depletion and taxes, or 8 cents a share on 14,584,025 shares of common after preferred dividends. This is approximately the same as in the first quarter when earnings came to $1,659,637. Nickel business was better than in the first quarter but the price of copper was lower, probably about counter-balancing any increase in income from nickel operations. At the meeting Monday, directors probably will reduce the rate on the common stock, either halving the 15c declared last time on the common, or making it 10 cents a share.

From the manner in which selling was concentrated in a handful of popular stocks yesterday, it was assumed that some of the larger operators adhering to the bear side of things had been spurred to renewed activity by the strenuous effort put forth by bull forces in a few prominent issues. Selling in those stocks under pressure assumed proportions sufficiently aggressive to suggest that the truce among professional operators, while perhaps not broken, had been not a little strained. In other words, many in the New York financial community were disposed to look upon the selling in stocks which proved vulnerable as a sort of retaliation for previous breach of etiquette by the bulls.

Sentiment was not particularly cheered by the further display of heaviness which developed in the leading commodity markets yesterday. Crude rubber slipped off to a new all time low, cotton was in new low territory for the decline going definitely under the early June bottoms, and September wheat yielded to a new minimum at 50 cents a bushel. Manipulation in July corn was resumed and with that month slated to go off the board at the close of business yesterday, urgent covering lifted it some 4½ cents a bushel to approximate Thursday's top. The true position of corn, however, was reflected in the action of the distant options, where December was quoted at the lowest levels on record back to 1908.

There have been no intimations from authoritative sources as to the showing of American Rolling Mill for the second quarter will be. However, it is certain that it will be much more favorable than the first three months when a loss of around $663,000 was recorded. April and May were comparatively improved over the preceding months and if June held up fairly well the second quarter may be a surprise to many in the financial district. It will be about two weeks before the results are made public. Meanwhile the stock has given indications at times of quiet accumulation.

For some weeks there has been talk of strong speculative sponsorship for Montgomery Ward. This was based on the anticipation that results for the second quarter would be better than had been estimated in most quarters. Whether the latest action of the stock market has delayed any pool activity remains to be seen. Those who have often been prominent during advantages in the stock have expressed the view that results in the second half should be in excess of those reported for the first six months.

Westinghouse Electric has continued to do a fairly satisfactory business in July, following the good results for June. However, interests in the company are of the opinion that the current dividend of $4 a share is too high in view of conditions and the outlook. Unless there is a decided change for the better in general conditions it is probable that further reduction will be made in the common distribution before the end of the year.

LOWER COSTS LIFT P. & G. PROFITS

Big Soap Company Shows Peak Earnings for Year To June 30; Sales Steady

CINCINNATI, Aug. 1. — Favored with lower costs of raw materials and of manufacturing, with an efficient management, and with an industry not seriously affected by lessened demand, Procter & Gamble Company was able to report net profit for the year ended June slightly in excess of the record t a year ago. The company ands with but very few indusal corporations doing a volume business exceeding $100,000,000 nnually which have been a sere depression period.

Economies through reduction of osts are reflected in percentage f net profit to gross sales, which ncreased to 11.9 per cent from per cent in 1930, 9.4 per cent 1929, 8.1 per cent in 1928, 9.2 er cent in 1927, 7.8 per cent in 926, 7.8 per cent in 1925 and 7.1 er cent in 1924.

OLUME SALES UP

Sales as measured in number of items sold showed an increase over the previous year, although gross dollar sales, because of the decline in prices of soap and food products of about 13 per cent, were off about 6 per cent to $190,523,237 from $203,365,610.

Net profit was $22,659,818, equal after preferred dividends to $3.37 a share on 6,410,000 no-par common shares, and compared with $22,450,600, or $3.37 a common share in previous year. Preferred dividends last year were increased by issuance of 54,569 shares of $100 par 5 per cent preferred in partial payment for purchase of James S. Kirk & Co., of Chicago. They amounted to $1,027,175 against $808,250 in previous year.

COSTS REDUCED

While not wholly immune from e effects of the depression, Proc & Gamble was able to inease its business in its two prinpal lines—soaps and edible prodts, which now just about share ike in dollar volume.

Net sales totaled 176,157,042 d were off $16,195,449 from revious year. However, cost of goods sold declined by $17,611,965 to $148,189,017, reflecting the management's efforts to reduce cost from the source of the raw material through manufacture and istribution. While plants already ere in a high state of efficiency, ew methods of operation were troduced to bring down the cost production. Company's guaraned employment plan, while havg the effect of filling wareouses with stocks when sales acken, has made possible low erating costs through regularity production.

FREIGHT RAISE OR WAGE CUT LOOMING

Washington Interprets Workers' Plea as Move To Prevent Reductions

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—(AP.)—The four great railroad brotherhoods have indicated to the Interstate Commerce Commission that they believe failure to grant the carriers' petition for higher freight rates will result in reduced wages and cause bitter controversy.

At least this is the Washington interpretation of the resolution drafted by the brotherhoods a few days ago for presentation to the commission. The actual matter of freight rates was barely mentioned in the paper, which devoted almost its length to a warning that any attempt to cut wages would be fought with every weapon at their command.

It is conceded that failure to get higher freight rates would leave the carriers with no alternative other than to cut wages. Already, virtually every other economy has been effected. The working forces have been reduced, the roads have refrained from purchasing supplies and have refused to go into the matter of additional capital expenditures. The net result has been continued inadequate earnings, and a piling up of postponed maintenance charges which must be met eventually.

SHIPPERS' POSITION

The actual wording of the resolution was a distinct disappointment to many railway officials who expected a flat plea that the rate increase be granted. In this connection it is said that the unions of railway conductors, engineers, firemen and trainmen, at their separate conventions, had reached accord to intervene before the Interstate Commerce Commission in the petition for higher rates.

Several factors improve considerably the outlook for an increase in rates. Foremost among these is the fact that important groups of shippers, with a few exceptions, have refrained from opposing the petition. Despite the supposition that the interests of these groups would seem to be on the side of low freight charges, their silence is held to indicate that efficient handling of their commodities would transcend the question of rates.

BIG FINANCIAL PROBLEM

Another, and perhaps more powerful, factor is the matter of public confidence. A great proportion of the wealth of this country is tied up in railroad securities as well as the resources of banks, insurance companies and other financial interests. The stability of these institutions is extremely vital to the economic welfare of the country, and any loss accruing through forced liquidation of these holdings would be recognized as a serious deterrent to business recovery.

Finally there is the policy of the government and industry generally against wage reductions. These factors, to unbiased capital observers, seem to override the question of the propriety of present freight rate schedules.

WEEKLY BANK CLEARINGS

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—Leading cities in the United States report further losses in bank clearings this week. The total of $6,006,639,000 reveals a decrease of 33.3 per cent from last year's figures. At New York City clearings amounting to $3,953,273,000 show a heavy decline of 36.8 per cent. The falling off at centers outside New York, where the total is $2,053,366,000, amounts to 25.5 per cent. There is an especially large percentage of decline at Chicago, one of 41.0 per cent.

In spite of the fact that the trend in most cities is so sharply downward, a very slight increase is noted at Cincinnati, the total for that city being 0.1 per cent above the figures for the preceding year.

Bank clearings for the week as reported to R. G. Dun & Co., showing increases or decreases compared with same period a year ago, follow:

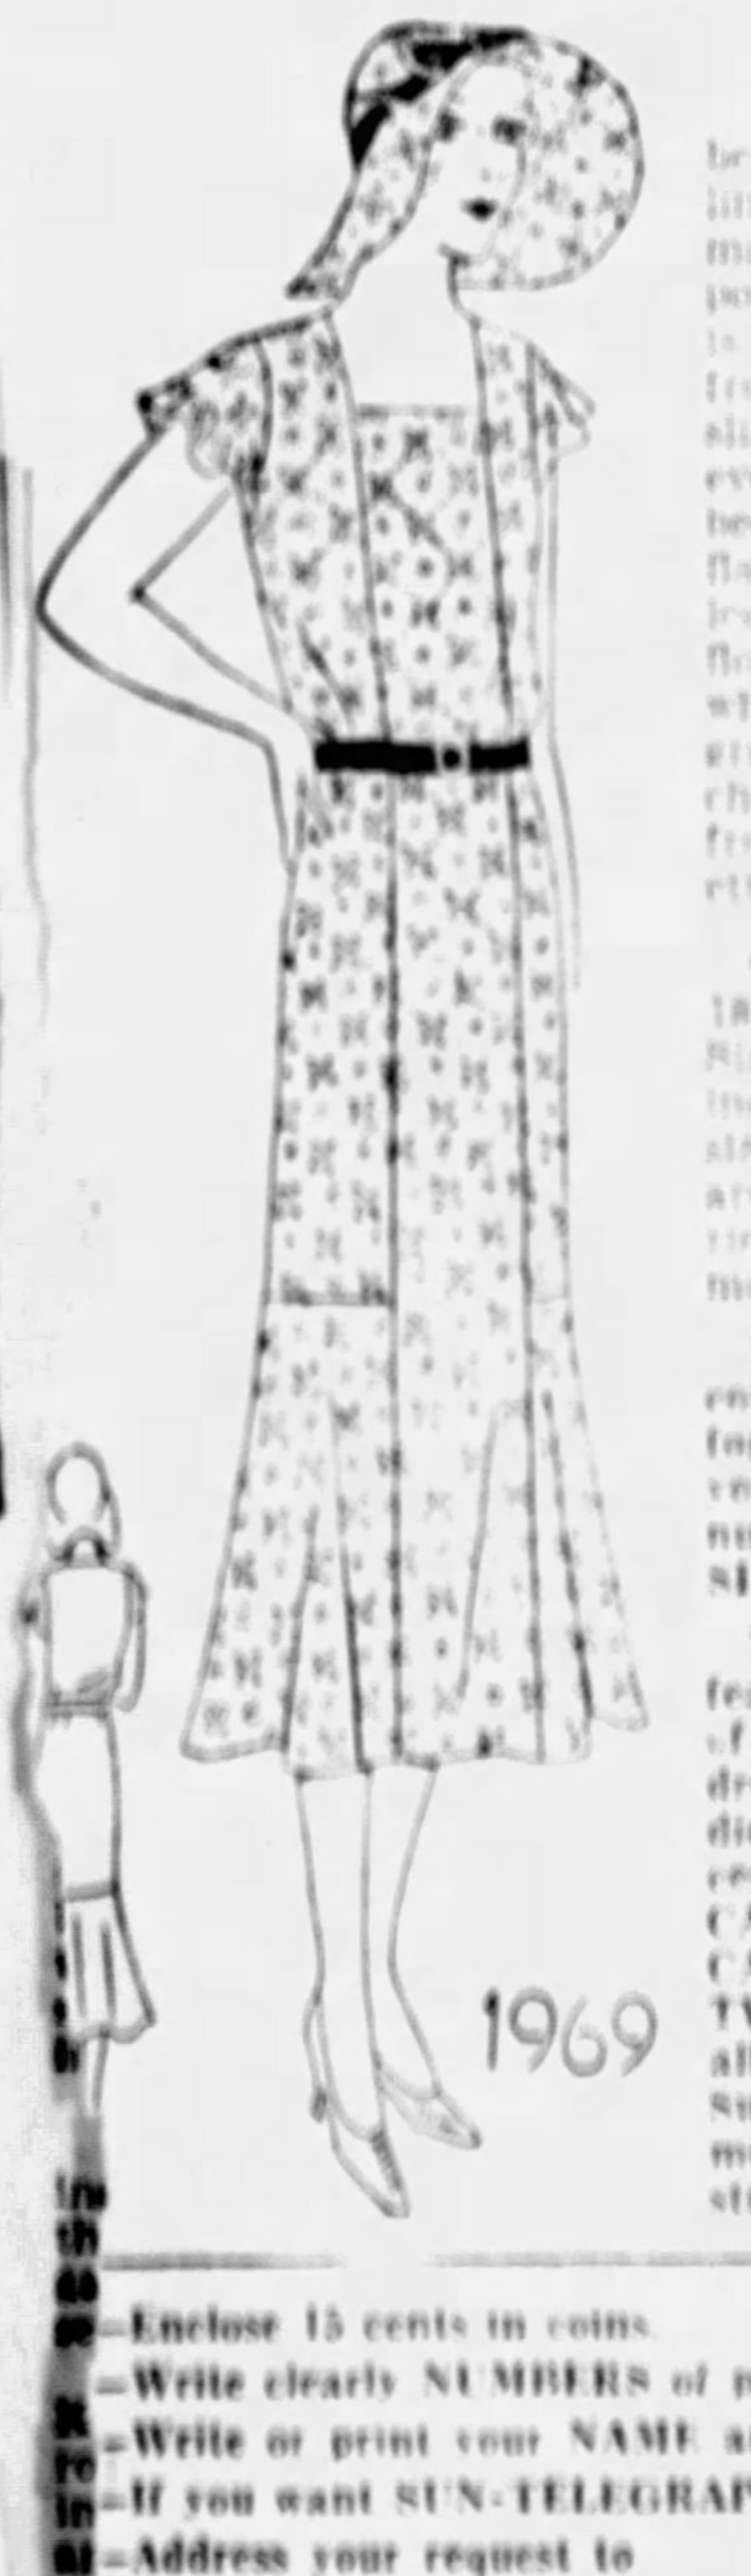
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Daily Pattern
Delightfully Cool Frock
Pattern 1969



By ANNE ADAMS

Now that particular emphasis is being placed on long sweeping lines, the designers are presenting many new versions of the always-popular princess frock. This one is a very successful model. In the front it is divided into long, slightly fitted panels, flattering to every figure, and in the back it becomes less princess, but equally flattering, faintly bloused above a loosely tied belt. The circular flounce at the hem makes the whole dress more slender and graceful. Eyelet embroidery is a charming summer choice for this frock, or silk crepe, printed georgette or voile.

Obtainable only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 requires 3⅛ yards of 39-inch material. Yardage for every size, and simple, exact instructions are given. No dressmaking experience is necessary to make this model with our pattern.

DESCRIBE AKRON

Features of Dirigible Recounted From Scene

We Now Present

By Howard L. Browning, Jr.

The much-heralded and expertly press agented dirigible Akron, soon to be turned over to the United States Navy as latest addition to its air force, will be described in 15 minutes of carefully chosen adjectives over the NBC-WEAF network at 2:15 tomorrow. Walter Butterworth, NBC announcer, will be the eulogizer, as he tours with Lieut. T. G. W. Settle, inspector of naval aircraft, through the giant Goodyear dock.

Next Saturday, Mrs. Herbert Hoover will christen the air monarch, rapidly being readied for flight.

"Domestic Symphony," by Richard Strauss, will come to WJAS from the Lewisohn concert at New York University from 9:30 to 10 p. m. tonight. It's one of Strauss' better-known attempts at shunning orthodoxy, is built around the events of the day in the average home. This corner will be listening for a man wiping—and dropping—the dishes.

A dramatization of "The New Magdalen," by Wilkie Collins, should entertain you if you're listening to Hank Simmons' Show Boat from 10 to 11 p. m. tonight. It's about a nurse who takes the name and credentials of a woman thought to have been killed on the battlefields during the Franco-Prussian War.

Serbian music only is prescribed by KQV at 7:30 p. m. The Dawn of Serbia Tambouritza Orchestra will play.

KDKA has a new series of programs, featuring the birthdays of famous men. They'll be irregular, depending on the birthdays. Biographical bits and good music will fill the periods. The first was broadcast last night, dedicated to Dr. H. P. Davis, called the "Father of Radio Broadcasting."

Denial of renewal of WIBR's license to operate in Steubenville, O., is recommended by R. H. Hyde, examiner for the Federal Radio Commission. The station was cited for five violations of "public interest, convenience and necessity": 1, programs not in public interest; 2, failure to announce phonograph records; 3, poor and inadequate equipment; 4, failure to use power in accordance with license; 5, operation of station by unlicensed operator.

George W. Robinson operates the station. Final action by the commission is expected in September.

The Loud Speaker By Louis Reid

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—The mahatmas of the microphone are willing to pay handsomely for new ways of presenting song-and-storied programs. To find them is next to digging up new television stories, their hardest job.

Easier is their conquest of concert stars, the garnering of the more spectacular sports, their ability to be on the spot when big news breaks. They are handicapped in their efforts to air new ideas in song-and-story by the advertising agencies which prefer to follow established lines, seeking the sure-fire to something they are not so sure will click.

And the agencies, with little knowledge of showmanship, follow each other around on the radio in dizzy circles, hiring a Broadway guest artist here and a jazz band there. Until today Broadway guest artists and jazz bands are stumbling over each other in the broadcasting salons.

Lindbergh's takeoff is to be described to the four corners. But we were right about his flight to Tokio, silence absolute will prevail . . . Come to think of it radio has yet to capture any of Frank Hawks' zips through the ether . . . The Post-Gatty tour will bring no shekels to N. B. C. But think of the good will . . . Broadcasters have often sacrificed money for prestige. Well, they can afford to. They at least can say "No depression here" and mean it . . . Haven't heard a prosperity talk on the air though, since the early days of Hoover's reign . . . Wonder why the broadcasters don't point a microphone to the lips of John D?

* * *

The musical tamale "Bolero" has been burned to such a crisp on the air that it is no longer presentable. And most the burning was done by the inferior cooks of cacophony . . . Despite the interest in Mussolini's mastodon, Primo Carnera, he seldom is herded into the radio studios . . . We prefer Mons. Vallee, McNamee, Gibbons on the radio to the stage. On the other hand we prefer Lily Damita, Evelyn Laye, Eddie Cantor, Fred Stone on the stage to the radio . . . Radio manufacturers are not dancing in the streets yet their foreign sales last May were almost double to those of May a year ago.

With the passing of Chauncey Depew and Job Hedges and the retreat to the silences of Will Rogers, political talks have become as solemn as a sermon or a lecture on auction bridge . . . Burlesques of grand opera are happily spared radio listeners . . . They say Jerome Kern is the first American tunesmith to pile up a million dollars . . . It won't be long before politicians will be brushing off their denunciations . . . There's no show so good on the radio as when the political gunners begin shelling each other . . . The only trouble is that not enough of the shells are dipped in the pail of ridicule.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

SALE OF OFFICE EQUIPMENT HOLDS UP

Burroughs Official States Volume of Business Only Slightly Under Last Year

Business for the first half of 1931 in Western Pennsylvania has been quite satisfactory, according to W. A. Newmann, manager of the Pittsburgh office, Burroughs Adding Machine Company.

It is slightly below the volume for the same period of 1930 but is coming from more general sources than last year's business.

IDEAS AND BUSINESS

The well sustained business is largely due to the fact that progressive business men are seeking out new fields and sources of profit and in doing so no longer find the old accounting records satisfactory. The progressive manufacturer and merchant of the Pittsburgh district is no longer satisfied with his methods of securing business, his old methods of organization and his methods of financial control and accounting by which he guides the activities of his business, Mr. Newmann states.

[illegible] declared that [illegible] American Industry [illegible] the first half of 1931 [illegible] 19.0 [illegible] chain stores, certain food products and cigarets appear to have maintained a relatively strong position.

Perhaps most striking has been the success of the gas and electric utilities, which despite the decline in their fuel loads through decreasing industrial use have virtually maintained earning capacity by popularization of household use of fuel.

In 1930 American householders bought [illegible] 4,000 electric refrigerators [illegible] gas refrigerators. In 1931 they bought 770,000 electric refrigerators and 60,000 gas refrigerators.

The strong position of the cigaret companies can be explained in one word: advertising.

Food sales, while declining somewhat, were generally held up by sales promotion of package goods. Chain stores went ahead because of drastic price cuts and vigorous competitive practices. Beverage companies also have had remarkable success in the face of the depression.

Silver Stocks in Shanghai Same

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—Silver stocks in Shanghai on July 23 totaled 194,000,000 taels, of which 148,000,000 taels were held in native banks, says a radiogram to the Department of Commerce from its Shanghai office. The corresponding figures for July 16 were 194,000,000 taels and 148,100,000 taels, respectively.

Sycee and silver bars were valued at 77,000,000 taels on July 23 as compared with 78,000,000 taels on July 16. The actual number of dollar coins in Shanghai on July 23 was 162,000,000, as compared with 160,100,000 on July 16.

Roads Put Fewer Cars Into Service

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—The railroads of the United States in the first six months of 1931 placed 6,951 new freight cars in service, according to the American Railway Association.

In the same period last year 49,208 new freight cars were placed in service and two years ago there were 32,794.

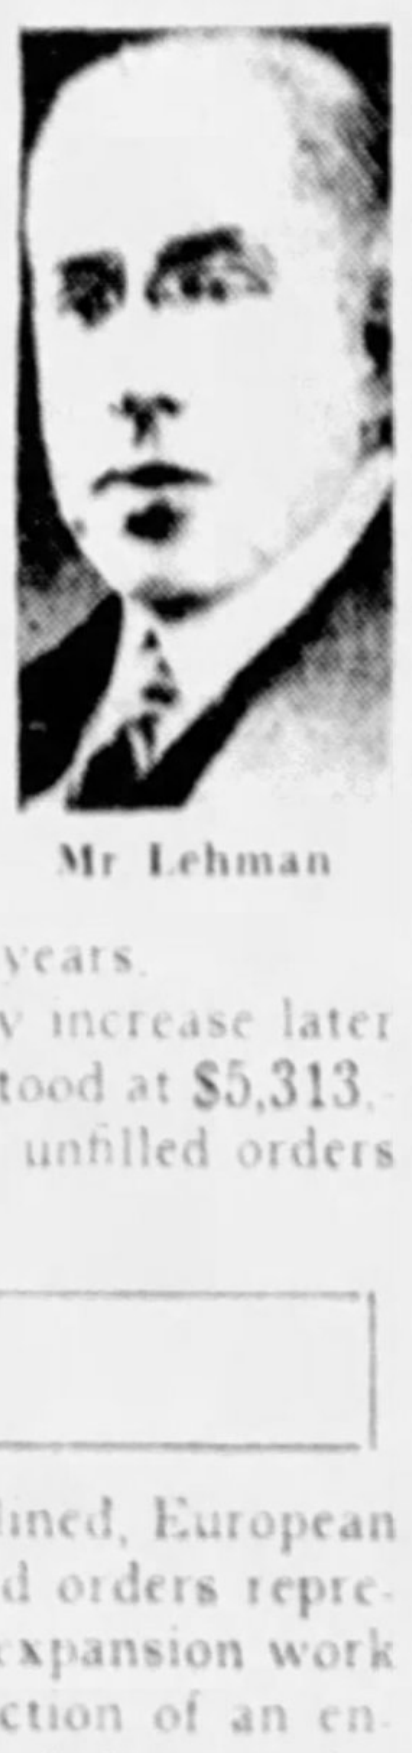
Dividend Cut to $1 Basis By Blaw-Knox Company

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

THE REDUCTION IN THE DIVIDEND of the Blaw-Knox Company to an annual basis of $1 from the former rate of $1.50 reflected the sharp decline in the buying of equipment by the steel industry which has been under way for the past six months. Other departments of the company have been able to maintain their sales at a fairly high rate.



Mr. Lehman

A. C. Lehman, president of Blaw-Knox, yesterday pointed to the fact that net profit of $632,760 or 48 cents a share in the first six months of the year was almost equal to the new dividend requirements. He declared that directors adopted the new dividend rate because it allows the company to maintain its present strong cash position.

In the first half of 1930 net profit was $1,684,002 or $1.27 a share. Mr. Lehman attributed the decline in earnings to the fact that shipments and incoming business in the first half of this year were only 60 per cent of the average for the first six months of the past two years.

As evidence of the fact that shipments may increase later in the year, he pointed to unfilled orders which stood at $5,313,000 on June 30, 1931, which were in excess of unfilled orders of $5,183,000 a year ago.

To Expand In Europe

WHILE DOMESTIC BUSINESS has declined, European sales have increased. About half of the unfilled orders represented sales of foreign subsidiaries. Extensive expansion work in England has been under way. The construction of an entirely new plant is being planned for France. A large order has been received for equipment for the construction of a vehicular tunnel at Antwerp which will be an almost exact reproduction of the Holland tunnel.

In this country, sales of road building equipment have been large. The low rate of steel mill activity has been reflected in reduced demand for rolls, valves, gauges and water cooling equipment.

The new types of grading equipment which have been recently placed on the market are being well received by contractors. A new subsidiary, the Blaw-Knox Pacific Corporation, has been formed to handle Pacific Coast business.

Shipments Gain

SHIPMENTS IN JULY were at a higher rate than the average for the first half of the year. The increased volume is expected to continue during August. Economies which will account for a $600,000 reduction in annual overhead costs will also be a factor in earnings in the second half of the year.

The current financial position is strong with current assets of $6,911,000, more than eight and one-half times current liabilities. Cash and marketable securities alone amounted to $2,379,000.

TAX DIVERSION OPPOSED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—Motor vehicle taxes should be used for the benefit of motor vehicle drivers and any diversion of such taxes to other uses than roads "will be fought to the bitter end by the 26,000,000 motor vehicle owners," says the American Road Builders Association.

There are numerous examples of the diversion of gasoline tax fund to conservation commissions and purposes other than road that so far do not amount to very much in money, the association says. But the principle of the tax, it declares, is that of a special tax in lieu of toll for the use of the roads. The reason the tax has been so popular in the past is ascribed by the association to the fact that the money has been spent for the benefit of those who pay the tax. The association says:

"Motorists are interested in roads and some are already seeking to have motor taxes reduced when the proceeds are not put back into roads. Some legislatures are killing the 'goose that laid the golden egg' that has done so much to stabilize road building."

GRAIN FREIGHT RATES CUT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—(INS)—Drastic reductions in freight rates on grain and grain products throughout the western section of the country became effective at midnight last night, following the action of the Interstate Commerce Commission in declining to make any changes in its order providing for reduced rates. About a year ago the commission revised the entire rate structure for grain and grain products and its effective date has been postponed from time to time at the request of the railroads. The latter applied for an injunction to restrain the commission from making the new rates effective, but the courts denied it. They now have an appeal before the Supreme Court to pass on the question, but it will not be heard until the court reconvenes in October.

STEEL PLANT BACKLOGS LOW

Purchases at Present For Prompt Shipment; September Gain Seen

By B. E. V. LUTY

For three successive weeks the steel ingot producing rate has held at about 32 per cent. Early in the month not a few mills doubted whether they would be able to sustain their rates and in fact some have not, but others have had increases. According to seasonal precedent there should be a slight increase this month but no definite predictions are made along that line.

There are no mill backlogs that would help substantially, all buying being for very prompt shipment. This results in varying operation almost day by day in given plants and weekly estimates of operating rates are simply averages for the whole week. Even blast furnaces do not operate regularly in some instances, the blast being occasionally shut off for a few hours.

SWING PICTURED

Seasonal increase in steel demand is fully expected, not later than the middle of September, but chiefly from miscellaneous buyers who take much steel in the aggregate, not from the large individual lines. Railroads will have no occasion to buy in any large way except for rail replacements in 1932. The automobile industry may have some pick-up after the present light month but usually it has not done as well in any of the last four months of a year as in July and August.

Total earnings of steel companies, before interest and depreciation, furnish some measure of the steel market's swing. From first to second quarter the Steel Corporation showed 29 per cent decrease and Bethlehem 15 per cent decrease, while Jones & Laughlin showed 64 per cent increase and even gained 23 per cent over the December quarter. Colorado Fuel and Iron Company decreased 51 per cent, while Inland had an increase and Republic reduced its loss. Youngstown Sheet and Tube had no material change.

PRICE CONCESSIONS

For the present quarter there is likely to be 20 to 25 per cent less tonnage, affecting earnings in a double way as unit costs would naturally increase, but there are offsets by prices being better in several connections and by the introduction of further economies.

Strictly specific information is not obtainable, but there are evidences that concessions on large structural jobs, from ordinary market prices for the plain material, have been reduced to usual or conventional amounts, which would represent a material improvement for steel as a whole, and a couple months ago line pipe prices were improved.

STOCK OF USED MOTOR TRUCKS HIGH

International Harvester Manager Says 1931 Sales Volume Large

Due to the exceptionally large volume of sales this year of the International Harvester Truck Company, there is an unusually large selection of trade-in trucks on display at 7325 Penn avenue, according to H. Klein, general sales manager of the Pittsburgh branch. He said:

"All of our used trucks are thoroughly reconditioned before re-sale. It is our policy to not only make friends with each new sale, but to keep them."

SAVINGS SEEN

William Klee, head of the used car department for the past 12 years, is particularly experienced in solving every conceivable kind of trucking problem for specific jobs or purposes, Mr. Klein says.

Late model International trucks available at a saving of from 40 to 60 per cent of the purchase price of a new truck, sold with a 30-day warranty, are an exceptional value this time of the year, Mr. Klein believes. He said:

SELECTION WIDE

"Now is the logical time to buy used equipment before the usual fall demand causes prices to go up."

The present late summer stock includes various makes and body types to cover a wide variety of needs. Vans for moving companies, bus bodies for transportation purposes, canopy and panel tops for grocers, laundries, cleaners, bakers and specialty stores, stake bodies for long distance haulers, open express and dump trucks.

WAGONER SAYS FAITH NEEDED

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—A larger volume of domestic business will closely follow the re-establishment of a measure of confidence, is the conclusion Philip D. Wagoner, president of Underwood Elliott Fisher Company, draws today from his company's June sales of bookkeeping machines. Domestic sales in that month showed increases of over 60 per cent for the Elliott Fisher model and over 50 per cent for the Underwood model over the month of May. He said:

"These increases were made when sales ordinarily show a seasonal decline and were a direct response to the better business sentiment and security prices which then prevailed. We have found that such improvement is at once reflected in increased buying of bookkeeping machines."

Used Truck Sale

Truck users considering the purchase of new trucks will be interested in making substantial savings by purchasing high-grade Used Trucks which carry our 30-Day New Truck Warranty. These savings range from 30% to 60%, based on new truck prices, and can be made on a wide variety of Internationals in 1½, 2, 2½, 3 and 3½-ton models. We have several other makes of trucks at prices from $50.00 up. We also have five solid tire trucks in running order at practically your own prices.

Come in and make your selections from this stock of high class used trucks. Liberal terms can be arranged.

It won't be long now before we'll hear the thud of a booted toe against the pigskin and another football season will be upon us. The opening of the training season is only a month away. Already Pitt is preparing for the campaign at the Stadium. One of the new devices installed to facilitate matters is the machine being used by Manager Oliver Stiff in the picture at the extreme left above. It keeps a check on tickets that prevents all possibility of error. It records the date of application, application number, amount of sale, cash or credit, allotment for various games and shows the daily receipts at a glance. Percy St. Clair Browne, custodian of property, has his hands full sorting out and making ready the equipment. Skladany, an end, and Siegel, a guard, are helping to brighten up the huge stadium with a bit of paint. Tickets most in demand are for the first appearance of the Army eleven in Pittsburgh, on November 14, and Manager Stiff appears to have scads of them . . . believe it or not!

BUCK FREEMAN SCOUTS LOCAL PLAYERS

Howdie Levey

ONE OF BASEBALL'S most prominent figures of earlier days has been sitting in at sandlot games in the Pittsburgh district this week, but nobody recognized the graying stranger until he introduced himself to Dick Cooley, well-known semi-pro umpire. The visitor was none other than Buck Freeman, home run king of more than three decades ago and the Babe Ruth of his era. He is now a scout for the St. Louis American League club, and his trip to Pittsburgh was made with a view to scanning the local sandlot ranks for timber that might be useful to the Browns.

One player in particular whom Freeman wished to observe in action, on the strength of a tip he had received, was Howdie Levey, shortstop of the Iroquois Club in the Greater Pittsburgh League, and brother of Jimmy Levey, now the regular shortstop of the Browns. Freeman admitted seeing promise in Howdie, as well as in Geisler, of Dormont, Hadley, of Book Shoe, and others. But he opined that local talent, for the most part, was too far away for immediate consideration.

THIS WAS FREEMAN'S first visit to Pittsburgh since the fall of 1903, when he came here as a member of the Boston Red Sox for the first modern world series with the Pirates. Buck was one of the outstanding American League players at that time. He played rightfield for Jimmy Collins' champion Red Sox and was cleanup man in the batting order.

However, it was as a National Leaguer that Freeman became most famous. Playing for Washington in the older circuit in 1899, he made 25 home runs during the season. And that was before the days of bandbox parks or the lively ball. Barring only the 27 round-trippers credited to Ed Williamson, of the original Chicago White Stockings, in 1884, Buck's cluster of 25 was the National League record. It stood until Rogers Hornsby ran up 42 in 1922, a mark that was boosted to 43 by Chuck Klein in 1929, and to 56 by Hack Wilson in 1930.

BUT THOUGH FREEMAN occupied at that time the same position that Ruth was to hold three decades later, you could keep yourself supplied with cigarets for a few days with the difference between the salaries of the two sluggers.

Buck sighs when he thinks of the $80,000 which Ruth is now pulling down annually. The old-timer discloses that his salary in Washington for 1899 was only $1,500 and—an item that will challenge the belief of the moderns—he had to attend to the washing of his own uniform.

FREEMAN BELIEVES THAT if Ed Delehanty in his prime had been privileged to bat against the lively ball of late years and in present day small parks he would have made as many home runs as Ruth ever did. "Delehanty was the greatest batsman of all time," Freeman declared, "greater than Cobb or any of them. They said that the ball of the last 10 years was no livelier than that of 25 or 30 seasons ago, but they never fooled us old-timers. Until it was changed this year, that ball was fully 100 per cent faster than the one used in my day. I have no grudges, but I wish I had been able to swing against that apple. I recall that Jimmy Collins, with whom I played on the Red Sox, and in my opinion the best third baseman and the best manager the game has seen, played back on the slow fellows and in on the fast ones. He could not have done that with the lively ball. They'd have knocked his legs off. At that I think modern baseball is a better sporting event. The long hits appeal to the fans. They don't care as much about inside play as formerly, anyhow, so what's the use?"

Remy Kremer

WHEN HE PITCHED his first shutout of the season yesterday Remy Kremer also made another hurdle which he had not been able to clear previously. It marks the first time this year that he has won two games in succession, as he received credit for last Monday's victory over the Giants, though Glenn Spencer finished for him on that occasion.

Failure until now to win two decisions in a row has not been due to poor work on the part of Kremer himself. The big righthander has been pitching great ball for six weeks, but has been the victim of a persistent hoodoo, with his mates failing to hit a lick behind him and also wobbling on the defensive. Fairly supported, Remy would now have at least a dozen wins to his credit instead of only eight.

TWO SUCCESSIVE SHUTOUTS for Pirate pitchers. Strong hurling is again featuring the drive in which the Bucs have won 13 of their last 18 games. Counting the last four frames of Wednesday's game, not a run has been scored off the Pittsburgh flingers in 22 consecutive innings.

Larry French retired the last 14 men in order on Thursday and Kremer bowled over the first 11 yesterday, making 25 batters in a row who failed to reach first base. Out of 35 consecutive hitters facing French and Kremer during the latter part of Thursday's game and the first part of yesterday's contest, only one got on the bases.

THERE'S NO ESCAPING Jack Sharkey. Just as fistic fandom is heaving a sigh of relief that it won't have to look at him any

HELEN JACOBS, MRS. MOODY MEET TODAY

SEABRIGHT, N. J., Aug. 1.—(AP.)—A tall, gaunt 19-year-old Californian, Ellsworth Vines, Jr., of Pasadena, today had won the Seabright Tennis Bowl and at the same time scored his second straight victory over the national champion, John Hope Doeg, of Newark, N. J.

The stout-hearted sophomore at the University of Southern California, victor over Doeg in the final of the Longwood Bowl tournament, came from behind to beat the champion again in the Seabright final yesterday, after a titanic struggle, 10-12, 6-8, 6-3, 8-6, 6-1.

GREAT UPHILL BATTLE

Vines' triumph came only after one of the gamest uphill fights the famous Seabright courts ever have seen. After trailing the national champion by two sets, with Doeg playing his best tennis of the year, Vines began a battle that at the outset appeared hopeless, smashing through Doeg's powerful service time and again. He finally wore down his slightly older rival until he had clinched the victory.

Vines attributes his remarkable record since last February—51 victories in 53 matches—to the fact that he has learned how to conserve energy. Last year here he lost his final round match to Sidney B. Wood, Jr., because he wore himself out before the match was half over.

TO RETURN TO COAST

After playing in the National championships at Forest Hills Vines will return to the coast to continue his studies.

With the men's singles finals out of the way, Seabright fans turned their attention today to the women's singles, where Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, of San Francisco, and Helen Jacobs, of Berkeley, Cal., were matched in the title round.

The women's doubles championship was decided yesterday when Josephine Cruickshank, of Santa Ana, and Mrs. Marjorie Gladman Van Ryn, of Philadelphia, defeated the Baroness Giacomo Levi, of New York, and Mrs. Lawrence A. Harper, of Oakland, Cal., 9-7, 8-6, 6-4.

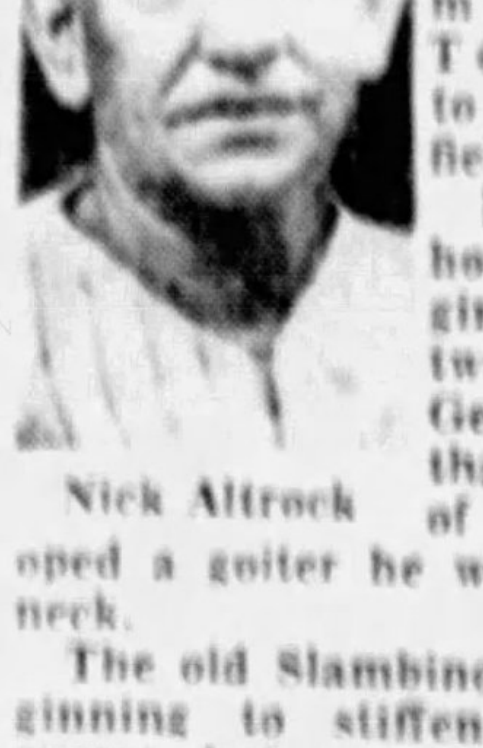
Says Nick Altrock

Baseball's Comedian

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—You will notice Chuck Klein isn't leading the home run tribe since the Phillies have been on the road. Once you get Klein out of that tabloid ball park in Philadelphia, he has to clout more than a Texas Leaguer to hit the outfield signs.



Nick Altrock

Right now the home run slugging race between Ruth and Gehrig is so close that if either one of them developed a goiter he would win by a neck.

The old Slambino's legs are beginning to stiffen on him, course, but you got to remem when you lam the ball into stands you can circle the ba in a wheel chair if necessary.

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Three freshly-crowned victors ascended 1931 thrones to provide the outstanding feature of yesterday's contesting as preliminary action in the second annual Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Pittsburgh public parks tennis championships approached the conclusion that is slated for this afternoon.

Jack Redmond, former Peabody southpaw, flashed sturdily to retain against the challenge of Albert Lazar, Harvard stylist, the Highland title that he copped in 1930. The ultimate verdict read 6-1, 9-11, 6-1, 6-4.

In the feminine sector, Letitia Schmidt, Knoxville chop-stroke artist, accounted for Ruth Prendleton, 6-3, 6-4, to cling to her Schenley premiership, and Dorothy Miller, youthful East Ender, garnered Highland laurels by virtue of a gallant battle to down Nancy McIlwain, clever newcomer to local racquetdom, 6-2, 3-6, 6-2.

MISS SCHMIDT FAVORITE

Miss Schmidt was runner-up to Mrs. Jean Artzberger for the inter-park crown and the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph women's single challenge cup last summer and on the strength of her showing yesterday, she stands excellent chance in the all-city titular series at Frick next Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

At Frick, Pittsburgh Parks champion Frank Broida, Harvard [illegible]der, will seek to keep [illegible]-and-Braddock arena honors in a final fracas with Paul [illegible], one time Pittsburgh [illegible] boys' titleholder, who opposed the Crimson contender under identical circumstances a year ago.

[illegible] Graham, North Side tactician, spilled the West Park dope by upsetting Ralph Beilstein in a lengthy engagement, 8-6, 6-4, 6-1, thus wrecking the prospect of another family act in the Lake Elizabeth center final. Beilstein, runner-up to his younger brother, Karl, in 1930, found difficulty in caring for the lobs raised without letup by the cagy Graham.

Karl Beilstein, who on Thursday night defeated Ray Cooper to gain the medal round, will take on Graham at 6 o'clock.

CREIGHTON IN FINAL

Billy Creighton, erstwhile ace of St. Mary's-of-the-Mount High School, bumped off Emanuel Bruder, South Hills hopeful, 6-3, 6-0, 6-3, to achieve the Olympia windup, wherein he encounters Jack Rosen, a second South Hillsman, at 3 o'clock this afternoon. An hour prior to the men's classic, Mrs. Jean Artzberger will place in jeopardy her Olympia women's wreath in a vital joust with her perennial nemesis, Mrs. Caroline Kurtz.

LOCALS PLAY AT SUMMIT

By VERN SWARTSFAGER

A number of local amateur golfers are participating today in the medal play test at the Summit Golf Club, Uniontown, for the right to be partnered with two former national open champions, Johnny Farrell and Gene Sarazen, in a special match Saturday of next week. Manager Leo Heyn has announced qualifying tests also may be made tomorrow. The two low scorers will get the assignment.

Joseph Royston, Jr., of Highland, and Mary Kuhn of the home club teamed well yesterday to top a field of almost 400 in the invitation mixed foursome tourney at the Pittsburgh Field Club. Their card for the alternate stroking reading 79-3—76, which gave them low net as well as low gross. Joe Crawford of Oakmont and Mrs. H. T. Patton of Altoona and W. C. Farquhar, Field Club champion, and Mrs. A. S. Dayton of Oakmont were tied for second low net at 77, and the Crawford-Mrs. Patton duo for second low gross with 87.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hallam of Wildwood and Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Jackson of the Country Club tied at net 75 for the top prize in Section II, while in Section III two home club entrants, R. A. McLaughlin and Mrs. D. J. McLaughlin, had low gross at 99 and F. McKenna and Nellie Hoover, also of the Field Club, had a low net of 77.

It was the largest and one of the most successful events of the entire local season.

[illegible] Bruno, pro at the Hill Crest Country Club, scored a hole in 1 on the 246-yard fifth hole of that club yesterday while playing with Dick Tenaree, former California champ.

ALUMNI DINES GROSKLOSS

Members of the Western Pennsylvania Alumni Association of Amherst College paid a big tribute to Howard (Howdie) Groskloss, Pirate secondbaseman, at a dinner held last night at the Yale, Harvard, Princeton Club in William Penn Way. Groskloss, a popular son of Sheraden, graduated with high honors at Amherst before he entered the Yale School of Medicine.

Harold (Pie) Traynor, captain of the Buccaneers, was one of the featured speakers of the evening. The Pirates' star thirdbaseman eulogized Howdie in a stirring manner. Pie gave an interesting recital which involved the baseball fates surrounding the Sheraden boy.

He told how the Pittsburgh management had figured on sending him to Wichita to play shortstop for that Western League team. An emergency arose on the Pirate team and the local youth was injected into the regular lineup, George Grantham moving to first base.

Dr. W. H. McCall of Kiski, Dr. Charles Steele Palmer, Amherst '79, Joseph H. Caughey, president of the local alumni body, David Kerr, George M. Rowland, Jr., and Thomas P. Trimble, Jr., also made talks in praise of Groskloss. Mitchell B. De Groot was toastmaster.

more, following one of the disappointing exhibitions in which he specializes, some promoter picks him up and sticks him right back on again. Despite his poor fight against Mickey Walker, Sharkey is booked anew for September 23 in Brooklyn, and his opponent is to be Primo Carnera, unless the courts once more restrain the big Italian. There are several heavyweights who probably could lick Carnera and who have a better right to a match with Sharkey if the former sailor must be put on again, but this isn't a case of selecting the best match. It's just a case of getting the money which Carnera will draw as a circus attraction in one big shot before somebody flattens him.

THE BOXING GAME locally has lost a colorful figure in the withdrawal of Joe Keally, veteran referee, who has resigned as an official after serving as third man in the ring at shows in Pittsburgh and vicinity for 15 years.

Keally often came in for a razzing by one set of fans whom his decisions at times failed to please, but it must be said of him that no amount of razzing ever swayed him in his judgment as to what was right. He always had the courage and the honesty to decide bouts the way they looked to him.

AS WAS GENERALLY expected, Henri Cochet has decided to turn pro and he will be swinging a money racquet by the middle of September on a tour with Bill Tilden in Europe. It's a decision that will help professional tennis and possibly open the way for the amateur stars of another country to take the Davis Cup from France next year.

Helen Wills Moody

Meanwhile the professional offers of promoters in a different direction will fall upon deaf ears. Mrs. Helen Wills Moody repeats emphatically that pro tennis, the lure of which proved too strong for Suzanne Lenglen, Bill Tilden, Vincent Richards, Fred Hunter and now Cochet, not to mention some lesser lights, has no appeal for her.

"I LIKE TENNIS too much to turn professional," Mrs. Moody assured Michael Foster. "The reports that I have been approached to turn professional and go on a tour with Henri Cochet are absolutely untrue. I have heard nothing about it, and if I were asked to desert the amateurs I would turn the offer down flatly. I like to play tennis; I like it a lot. And I intend to continue playing the game until I am 60. But I will never play as a professional. Neither am I going to enter the movies." She added her disapproval of shorts for women tennis players. "Stockings are out of date for women on the tennis courts, and I thoroughly approve of short skirts, the shorter the better," she said. "But I think shorts are hideous, and they will never make any headway among the ranking women tennis players."

NEGRO BOXER IN HOSPITAL AFTER BOUT

Dave Harper of Jackson, Miss., was in a serious condition and under observation in the Montefiore Hospital this morning as a result of his beating at the hands of Long Tom Williams, Chicago heavyweight, who scored a technical knockout over the southerner in the third round of a scheduled 10-round feature bout of an all-Negro show at Hickey Park, Millvale, last night.

It was found Harper was suffering from contusions in the stomach and concussion of the brain.

Dr. M. R. Goldman, commission physician, reported early this morning Harper was doing as well as might be expected. He was completely out for 20 minutes following the bout, the referee having stopped it after Dave twice had met the canvas in the third stanza.

McVEY HALTS TAYLOR

K. O. (Sunny Jim) McVey, 170¾, won via the technical knockout route in the fifth round of the scheduled eight-round semi-final when the seconds of Jack Taylor, 171¾, Buffalo, tossed a towel into the ring. Dixie Shannon, 166, Tupelo, Miss., also won on a technical knockout, halting Cato Caluba, 160½, Cleveland, in the first round.

Jack Hernandez, 144¾, of Erie, won the verdict over Allen Beatty, 145, McKeesport, in six rounds. Melody Jackson, 124¾, St. Louis, was given the decision over Sammy Burns, 128¼, of the Hill, in another six-rounder, and Clarence Hoffman, 140, Grand Rapids, Mich., won a unanimous decision over Jackie Griffiths, 135¼, of the Hill, in the opening four-rounder.

BLAHA SCORES KNOCKOUT

Clem Blaha, Pittsburgh Lyceum, knocked out via the technical route Sidney Aurelia, Valley Boxing Club, in the second round in the only bout that did not go the limit on the amateur boxing program of Curtiss-Wright A. C. at Bettis Field last night. The summary:

112-pound class—Ray [illegible], Braddock Library, defeated Frank [illegible], Homestead Library A. C., 3 rounds.

118-pound class—Elmer [illegible], [illegible] Boxing Club, defeated Paul [illegible], Homestead Library, 3 rounds.

Sports Vignettes

One of the New York baseball writers with the Giants kept cool while in town for the recent series with the Pirates by riding up and down the escalators of one of the department stores. . . . What a big city feller does when he gets to traveling around the country. . . . Jack Zivic, former star welterweight boxer, leaves Pittsburgh again today with his wife and daughter, Jacqueline Audree, who will be four years old next month, to make their home in Pelham Manor, N. Y. . . . Jack, who has a good income from an early investment, plans to enter some line of work in New York and to give up the ring except to dabble around in the gymnasium now and then and keep in condition. . . . His father died a few weeks ago. . . . There's a Ripley Believe It Or Not about Baby Jacqueline Zivic. . . . She was born in Ohio, observed her first birthday in San Francisco, was in New York on her third anniversary and her parents are planning to take her to Maine for her fourth. . . . If possible, they will continue the plan indefinitely, and she'll have something to talk about when she grows up. . . . It isn't every child that can boast of having celebrated every birthday in a different state.

Jack Zivic

Donald Fagg, the fighting coal miner, of Clinton, Ia., who boxes Bucky Lawless in the main bout at Hickey Park, Millvale, next Thursday night, as a result of recently having won a decision over Buck McTiernan at Huntington, W. Va., is not entirely a stranger in these parts. . . . He competed in the Pennsylvania Railroad championships here last spring, winning the middleweight title after having qualified with victories in preliminary tournaments at Terre Haute, Ind., and Columbus, O. . . . He is short and heavy set and a rough, tough type of mixer, 22 years old, married and father of an infant son. . . . A younger brother, Johnny, a lightweight, also is fighting out of Indianapolis.

Tough times in the coal mining industry around Clinton caused Fagg to turn his thoughts ringward. . . . He took his first steps when he entered an amateur tournament sponsored by Bud Taylor, the former bantamweight and featherweight star, in Indianapolis and within less than a year was boxing windups around his home section. . . . Lawless will have to be in good shape against this Fagg fellow or suffer his second straight defeat here. Teddy Yarosz having beaten him at the Meyers Bowl last Monday night.

and the Sheraden athlete says he is ready to go back to his post. He is sure to be on the job if Eppa Rixey twirls against the Buccos, and the veteran left-hander has been nominated by Manager Dan Howley. Glenn Spencer will pitch for the home team.

RAY BLANKS REDS

The Freebooters can ring up their fourth success of the week if they cop today's scrap with the Reds. They twice defeated the Giants and lost two games to the Men of McGraw.

The Ensmen yesterday turned in a fine triumph over the Reds with Remy Kremer pitching like a champion. Kremer blanked the Queen City athletes while he and his mates were solving the slants served by the opposing pitchers. The score was 5 to 0.

The whitewash triumph was the second in two days. On the previous afternoon Larry French was in remarkable form as he shut out the Giants on four safeties. Kremer allowed only six hits in his joust with the Reds.

The Howleymen had Kremer in his worst mess in the ninth inning. Remy lost his control in this frame, he issuing two passes that filled up the sacks with only one out and the top of the batting order ready to swing.

COMES THROUGH IN CRISIS

Remy showed his real brilliance in the clinch. Kremer is primarily the sort of flinger who shows more stuff when a crisis arrives. In this instance he made Crabtree hoist a little fly to Gus Suhr and then he took Dangerous Nick Cullop out of the picture on a fly to Lloyd Waner.

Kremer's control was just a bit off at parts of the game, although he was not missing the corners by a very large margin. In a couple of other spots he had to bear down to hold the enemy runless, but he had the stuff whenever the occasion demanded it.

Larry Benton worked cleverly against the Pirates through six frames, although the home boys were able to bunch three of their five hits in the third to produce two runs.

A wide throw opened the way for another Pirate tally in the fifth, and the Pirates, hitting against Benny Frey, merged four hits for two more markers in the seventh.

Classic battles of the year feature this afternoon's card for stars of both divisions of the Pittsburgh Tennis Association Inter-Club League. Thundering into the 1931 stretch, the champion Edgewood array and the powerful P. A. A. combine, deadlocked for first position in Section I and frantically ambitious for possession of the coveted Davis Keg, tangle on the Suburbanite lot in a contest that is likely to determine the destiny of the loop title.

Meanwhile in Section II, on the Shannopin Country Club courts, the pace-setting Bellevue array seeks to stand off its most menacing rival, College Hill, the encounter being certain either to make or to break the visitors' hopes of nosing out the North Boroughs contingent, which now enjoys a four-match lead over the East Enders.

Rounding out the Section I card, College Hill will entertain Stanton Heights at Beaver Falls, South Hills will invade Mt. Lebanon for annual neighborhood grudge tilt, and University Club will trek to Westinghouse. College Hill and Mt. Lebanon loom as likely winners, with the Varsity-Electric affair pretty much of a tossup.

In the secondary sector, Duquesne Library should profit by its at home party for Westinghouse Seconds, and Washington Heights should do likewise by the visit of West Penn Power. Most anything can happen in the South Hills Seconds - Rockwood clash at Rockwood.

SMITH JOINS FAIRMONT

FAIRMONT, W. Va., Aug. 1.—Russell Smith, former Scottdale pitcher, joined the Fairmont Middle Atlantic League club yesterday. Another pitcher and a catcher will be added to the club today or tomorrow. More than 800 turned out for last night's game between Fairmont and Cumberland, the first since the club's franchise was saved. The local club won, 12-3.

Scottdale, with Lee on the mound, defeated the Beckley Black Knights, 5 to 4, and took the odd game of the series.

Clarksburg won both ends of a doubleheader in Wheeling, winning the first game, 4-1, and the second, 3-2. Charleston walloped Beaver Falls, 12-4, at Charleston, and Charleroi was blanked, 5-0, at Johnstown. Huntington handed Youngstown a 7-5 pasting at Youngstown.

Cochet to Turn Pro Next Month

PARIS, Aug. 1.—(AP.)—The professional tennis ranks received a valuable addition when Henri Cochet, world ranking amateur player, announced last night he would turn professional about the middle of September.

Don't Fail Your Hubby When He Needs You Most

He sinned. Broke his wedding vow, after 13 years of happy marriage—and she discovered it. Then she did what a wronged wife is supposed to do.

Stormed, raved, ordered him out—

Said she was glad that their marriage was all over.

Shrieked that she hated him —hoped she'd never see him again.

But she lied! Knew she was lying while she said it. And now she's eating her heart out with regret. At each turn, she meets some haunting memory. Finds herself waiting, at twilight, for the sound of his step. Then suddenly realizes that she will never hear it again, and goes mad with misery. All over! She can't believe it.

But is it all over? Isn't there any hope?

WITH OTHER WOMAN

Read—and see if you would tell her what I'm about to write, after publishing her letter.

"Dear Miss Martin:

"Will you help me with the most serious problem I have ever had? I am counting on you. I have no one else to turn to.

"I dearly love my husband, he has been a wonderful pal to me, until just lately. At 14 I married him, and at 16 our girl was born. We have been married for 13 years. And you can see that we are both rather young. He is only 35. When we were married he was in the army and had been ordered overseas, so we rushed our marriage on that account.

"Now, here is the trouble. Someway, I have failed him. How—or when. I do not know. But I found he had turned to his brother's ex-wife, and, being a handsome man and making good money, he was more than welcome. Well, just by chance I ran into them together. We had a dreadful battle when we got home, and it wound up with him saying, 'Yes, I love her. What are you going to do about it?'

"I was stunned, because he has always been so affectionate, and seemed to so enjoy being with me and working around the garden. I finally gathered my senses together, and told him I was perfectly willing to give up any claim on him, if he would continue payments on our home and take care of our little girl. I gave him to understand that I'd had an idea how things were going, and was glad that it was all ended . . .

STILL LOVES HIM

"But that isn't true. I'm not glad. I still love him. I miss him terribly. I find myself going to the window at 6 at night to watch for him . . . and when I remember he isn't coming it just breaks my heart.

"I am hoping against hope they won't last together, her divorced that woman because she ran him into terrible debts and was chasing with other men. And I would take him back so gladly if he wanted to come.

"I am thinking of renting the home for a time, taking our girl and visiting my sister, who lives in another state. Do you think he will miss his beautiful home . . . and maybe wonder about me and want me, if we do go away for a while?

"Do you think I have a chance? Would you go away, if you were me? I don't know where to turn, or what to do. I am so lonely. Please help me.

"LORRAYNE."

Help you? I'm hoping I can, Lorrayne. But I wonder if you'll take my advice? Have you the courage? It will take plenty.

For, first, you must go way back and think this thing out straight. It will do no good to get him back (even if you can), if life thereafter is to be a hell of rankling resentment and ignominious forgiveness.

He sinned? Yes, indeed he did. But his sin was more against himself than you. And you sinned as greatly by failing him in his moment of sin.

There's a new book written for wives like you, Lorrayne. It's "Break-Up," by Hagar Wilde—and it tells of just such a husband and just such a sin—and just such an act as yours.

BOTH UNFAITHFUL

Beryl, too, "caught" her Charles in his first and only offense. And night and day she wept and nagged until at last Charles bolted. Then she was thunderstruck. She could not believe he had gone. This, thought Beryl, was one more monstrous crime against her.

"I've always been so faithful to him!" she cried.

"Until he needed your faith," answered her sister.

Your man was unfaithful to you in moral sense, Lorrayne. You were unfaithful to him with your heart. You betrayed him as truly as he betrayed you.

And you betrayed yourself when you told him you had ceased to love him.

SHOULD GO TO HIM

Can you erase the consequence of that betrayal? I don't know. But you can at least clean yourself of dishonesty by telling him the truth. And perhaps if you free yourself from your lie, you'll free him too. He deserted you, but you also deserted him when you told him you were "through." You quit, and left her the field . . . maybe if you had hung on, told him as you have told me, that you loved him with all your heart, he would have broken off with her. Do it now. I know it won't be easy. I know your pride has been laid in the dust . . . but go to him, and tell him that you do still love him and miss him.

And then what will happen? I think he'll come back. For I don't think he ever really wanted to go away.

You see when you married you were too young. You took on heavy responsibilities and worked hard, and life sort of lost its salt. And the chances are that this affair of his is just a sort of crop of belated wild oats . . . a crop that he'll likely be heartily sick of before it goes very far.

So give him the chance to come back, dear. Be a Regular Wife when . . . and if . . . he does come, and I'll wager he'll stay.

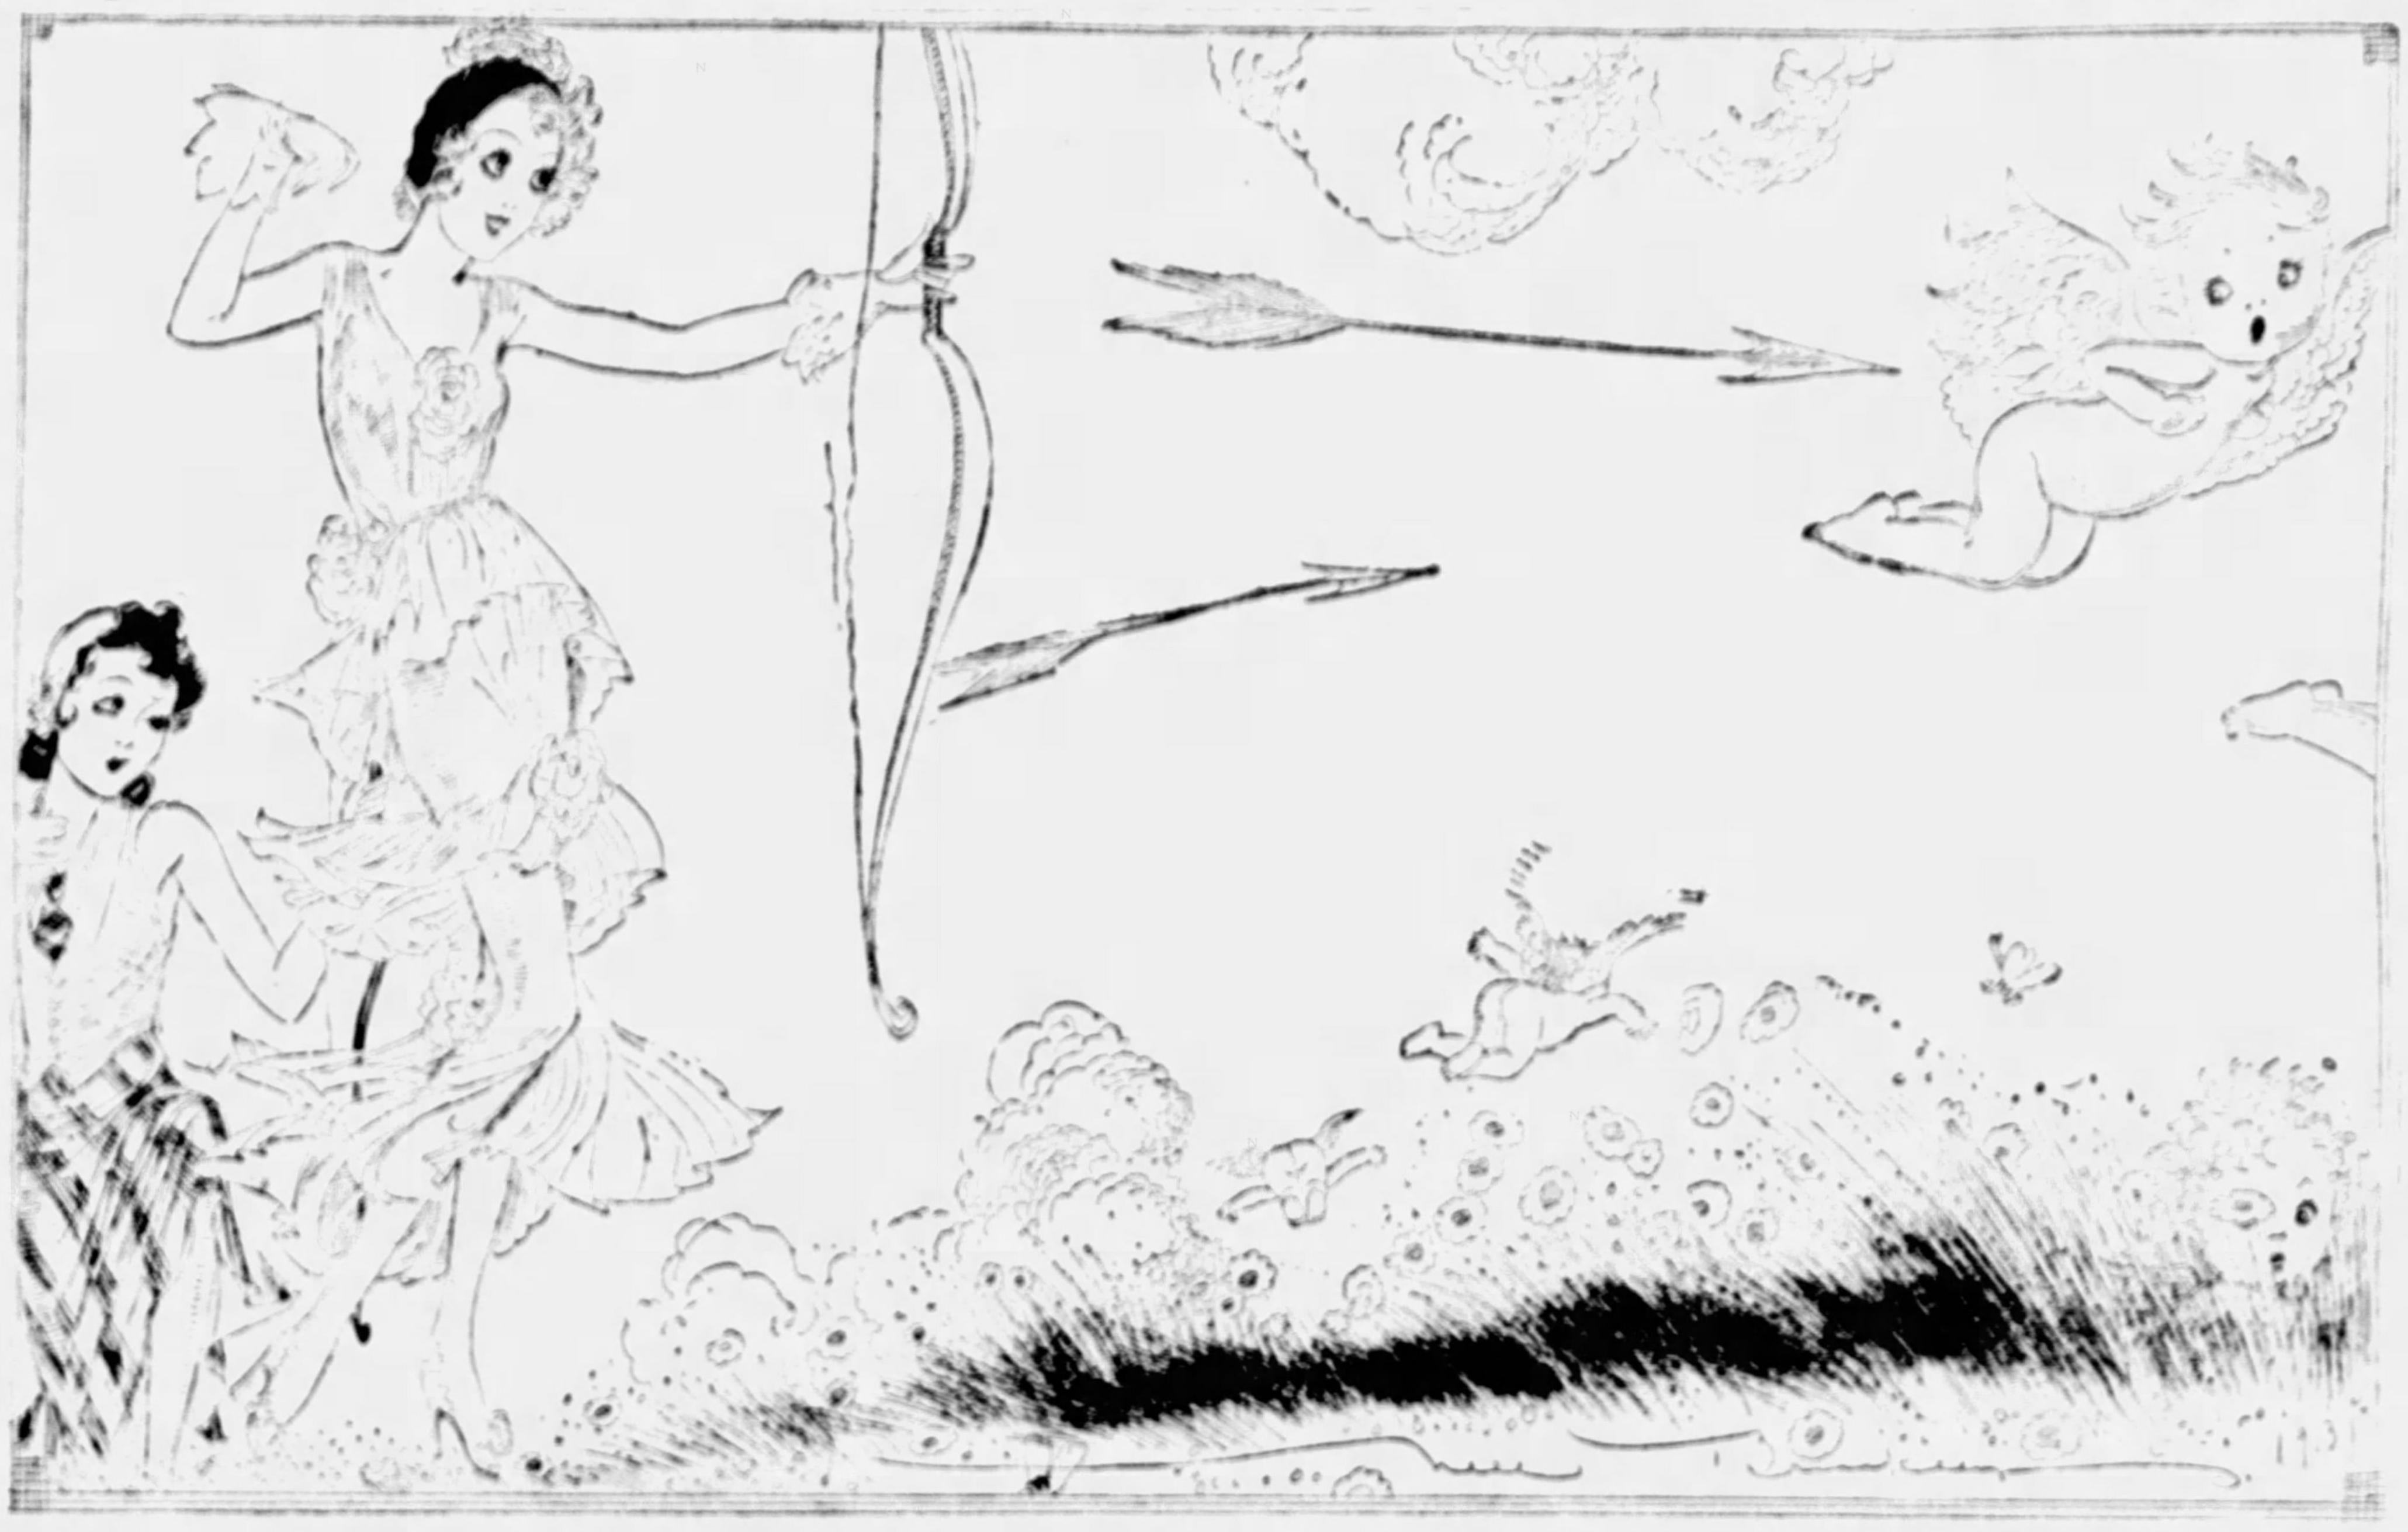
Open Season -:- -:- -:-

Drawn by Nell Brinkley



Open season any time at all, and all of the time, for this bright bird! Gloriette doesn't have to look at the sky to check up on the well-known "Southerly wind and a cloudy sky." She just sallies out in her very prettiest outfit, instead of pinks and breeches, any day, any time, any place, finding each precious day a "hunting day," for the sly game called Cupid.

Eros' mother, Venus, and all the world of poets since her day have done so, too, did quite a bit of boasting about his rare qualities, his beauty, his keenness, his might with the bow and arrow, his wit, his honey-dripping tongue, his rare gold plumage and his hair of 14-carat gold, his swiftness of flight that carries him like light ahead of any missile except one of his own arrows! She pretended to bemoan, but told with pride of his slyness, his craft, his wariness, his guile.

So since the beginning of Father Time himself, Love has been made precious quarry. And a hunter of prey himself that was to be run from if you don't wound him first!

Oh bird of bright burning beauty!—all the world longs for you, dead or alive—but most of all they crave you where you like least of all to be—in a cage! Men pore over their material affairs—but in the corner of their eyes they see the flicker of your wings, and in the farthermost tiny corridor of their ear under the roar of the subway and the whirr of the market and the shattering ramming-home of rivets on sky-piercing buildings, is heard the silken rustle of your wings.

Boys and girls grow up to dream of you. Women ponder on clothes, food, house-decorating, face-decorating, but it's all for LOVE. He flutters across the memories of grandmothers. The impression of his foot is still on the ancient heart of a grandpere. The heart is slower and dryer—but the impression remains. Of the tread of Love the DESIRABLE—the DESIRED.

Love's loose in the world—and the season is never closed.

—NELL BRINKLEY.

Correct Manners

Betrothal Cards

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

When selecting betrothal cards (engraved) is it "the thing" to have Mr. and Miss precede the names, and if so, why?

For instance:

Betrothed
Mr. John Henry Walters
Miss Joan Mary Kent

2. Would it be proper to eliminate the Mr. and Miss, and have the cards read,

Betrothed
John Henry Walters
Joan Mary Kent

Your column is a great help to me and I read it always.

T. A.

It is not "the thing" to send betrothal cards of any kind, dear friend, and I hope that you will not decide to do this. Write notes to the friends who do not live near enough to you to make a formal announcement of the engagement in the newspapers.

Club Compliments

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Recently I received a note from the president of a club of which I am a member. The note was one of thanks and contained many generous remarks sincerely written. I should like to know if it would be proper to answer this note, telling the president that I am ever willingly at the disposal of the club and only too glad to do my small part at any time?

B.

Yes, this would be the perfect thing to do, and I am sure that he would be delighted to know of your generous and gracious suggestion of service to the club.

An Annulment

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A friend of mine was married and her parents sent out wedding announcements. After about four months, her marriage was annulled. The question is, what is proper to do about her wedding gifts? She had used some of them, still some say it is proper to return them.

What do you think?

SOME ONE IN DOUBT.

In this case I think that would be unnecessary to ret the gifts. It would seem a forced to do this.

Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Mr. Spencer Reveals Information About Mystery Car

The lines around Lillian's mouth etched themselves more deeply when my father asked her how she explained the fact that Samuel Brixton undoubtedly engineered the throwing together of his stepdaughter, Carolyn, and Marion as classmates at Whitney Hall.

"I've muddled over that a good deal," she said at last. "Of course, a baby could see that his choice of a school for Carolyn didn't just happen. Helena is ingenuous enough to believe Old Man Coincidence was working his long arm overtime, but I've suspected, rather known, all the time that Sam planned the thing deliberately."

"But there isn't any evidence to connect him with the attempt to steal the box—none at least that would stand up in any court," Dicky said thoughtfully.

"That is true," my father assented, "but there is sufficient to convince us, I think. Suppose we see just how the pros and cons stand."

He took up from the arm of the chair a tiny pad of paper upon which in the intervals of our colloquy he had been drawing apparently meaningless lines. But all of us knew that he was following a habit of years and employing a highly specialized shorthand of his own to make concrete his impressions of our talk and the problem we were discussing.

"In all probability Samuel Brixton is the only person who knows anything of Tom Morton's business affairs while they were in partnership," he began, and looked at Lillian for confirmation.

"Or afterward," Lillian said. "Tom had no affairs after Brixton got through with him. What he saved from the wreck he invested in safe mortgages and bonds, and there weren't enough of them to afford a decent living. Of course, I do not know this first hand. His mother told me about it after his death, which left her penniless."

"Then it follows," my father went on, "that if there is anything valuable in that box, Brixton is the only man who knows what it is."

"The only white man," Harry Underwood spoke for the first time since he had heavily agreed with Lillian's flaming "You have no right!"—robbing him of any authority over Marion.

"Ah!" my father said comprehendingly. "You subscribe then to the theory that the Chinese are acting independently of these other fellows."

"Depends upon whether this Chink who talked to Madge was really in terror of death or giving a realistic imitation. I'm inclined to the first theory. Lady Fair doesn't often fall down in her judgment of facial expressions."

"I suscribe to that emphatically," my father said, smiling at me.

"And now," he went on, slipping the tiny pad back into his pocket, "to tell you what I found out downtown. The blue sedan was on the streets this morning. It first parked near the bank, then the driver appeared to change his mind after it had stood there a few minutes, and drove it farther up. Three men got out and went into different shops, making small purchases. One went into the bank and asked to have a $20 bill changed. On the street one of them asked the way to North Haven, and they went over the bridge to that delightful island. The man who answered their question thought they had gone to the ferry on the other end of the island, and thus to Greenport, on the Sound. But after two hours they came back, driving through the Harbor without stopping, and the people who had remarked them thought they had been visiting some one of the wealthy summer residents of North Haven."

"That is all the information I was able to glean," he said. "What do you make of it?"

-:- Household Hints -:-

When preparing food for baby, keep stirring the food until cool after removing from fire. This will prevent skin from forming on top and the full nourishment will be retained.

When bottling fruits or catsup, etc., boil the corks for a few minutes so they become soft and pliable. Then they are easily pressed into the bottles and when cold will fit tightly.

Use wire clips to join to edges of material instead of basting them—they will hold the edges securely until the seam has been stitched. The clips prove useful in cutting out patterns.

How to Keep Well

Don't Ignore Baby's Steady Weight Losses

Dr. Copeland

One of the most unpleasant ailments encountered in the care of infants and children is "marasmus." This condition is also spoken of as "infantile atrophy," or "simple wasting." It is shown by the infant's gradual but progressive loss of weight.

This condition of impaired health is rarely seen in the country, or where the health of the parents is good. It is more commonly found in large institutions caring for infants. Some times it is associated with tuberculosis and other constitutional diseases. Frequently it can only be traced to marked lack of nutrition and improper feeding.

Many cases are attributed to hereditary weakness. In spite of supervised and well-regulated feeding the child thrives poorly and fails to gain in weight.

These children present a most pathetic picture. They look old, due to marked loss of weight, the skin is wrinkled and hangs in folds. The legs are like drumsticks and the hands resemble bird-claws. These unfortunate children are often reduced to mere skin and bones.

The condition is a severe one and may prove fatal. The longer it continues the more serious the outlook. When recognized quickly and promptly checked the child may be saved.

If possible, these cases should be taken to a hospital at once. Here everything scientifically possible can be done for the child. A wet-nurse can be secured, or the best artificial feeding and care can be given.

When recovery occurs it is complete. By the time the child reaches the age of two or three he is normal and as vigorous as any child of his age.

Breast feeding should always be encouraged where possible. Marasmus is most common in bottle-fed infants. If young mothers were encouraged to nurse their infants, I believe there would be fewer cases of marasmus.

Where artificial feeding must be resorted to, a proper milk supply must be located. Exact instructions in infant feeding should be secured. In addition, the importance of personal hygiene, fresh air and sunlight cannot be overemphasized.

The Cardiac Clinic

By DOROTHY ROE

It's an old Abyssinian custom.

And Spanish.

And American.

Since the world began, girls have been keeping diaries.

And what a flock of reading it would make if the diaries of all the ancient charmers had been subjected to modern journalistic methods.

Can you see the headlines on Cleopatra's diary?

And can you imagine the excitement in Greece, if Helen of Troy had told all?

But in those days it was safe to keep a diary. They didn't have tabloids then. Or modern breach of promise suits. Or murder trials staged like a million-dollar musical comedy.

The secrets that a flapper poured out to her diary were usually inviolate.

Nowadays diaries furnish most of the spice when a chorus girl or a society matron runs afoul of the law.

Two recent murder mysteries in New York have depended almost entirely on diaries for the clues supplied to the police.

If Vivian Gordon, the Broadway girl whose murder fired the imagination of the nation, hadn't kept a diary the details of her career might never have been known. And her little daughter might not have ended her life because of the shame.

If Starr Faithfull hadn't confided all her spangled adventures to her diary, her family might have been spared much pain, and her most intimate thoughts and experiences wouldn't have become public property.

When she set down the record of her loves and her heartbreak the tragic Starr didn't dream that some day those highly private words would form a chain of headlines across the nation.

She didn't think the details of her affairs would be devoured eagerly by a million stockgirls and stenographers, debutantes and society matrons, finding vicarious thrills in the story of her pathetically frustrated career.

Maybe it's the urge of unsatisfied romance.

Maybe it's the desire to preserve lovely memories—the same principle as saving old love letters.

But both of these practices are becoming dangerous.

In these fast-moving days, no one knows when he or she may become front page material.

A girl who is unknown to the sensation loving public today may leap to nation-wide prominence tomorrow if she is kidnaped, or if she falls in love with a gangster, or if she files a breach of promise suit.

And if she has a diary, it's meat for the newspapers.

The public seems never to grow tired of reading of the intimate thoughts and experiences of a figure in the day's news.

So here's a word to the wise—burn your diaries behind you.

The Beauty Box

The powder pad should not rub elbows with anything else in the purse or shopping bag, but be kept in a container. Soiled pads are responsible for many a case of blackheads; they pick up dust and grind it into the pores of the skin. Soiled wash cloths are a menace.

Hollows of the neck and protruding collar bones are not always caused by emaciation. Often they are the direct result of wrong posture. Keep the chest high, and the backbone stretched to its utmost limit. Note the effects. Be careful not to permit the shoulders to fall forward.

Superfluous hair on the legs can be removed easily by means of a depilatory. A smooth pumice stone is used by some who have faith in it, but it will inflame and make tender skin that is thin and sensitive. Depilatories are chemicals that dissolve a hair at the point where it emerges from the skin. Some women find that after repeated applications the little fuzzers lose heart, give up the ghost and disappear.

Scrub Woman Proves to Be Missing Girl's Mother

Synopsis

Because Katherine Mason believes in playing around and having a gay time she finds herself deeply involved in troubles. She jilts Peter Thompson because he is poor. She expects to marry rich Thad Parsons but he marries Arline Sargent who is named in a divorce scandal within six months. Katherine is getting fond of Forrest Malvern, a rich man of 40, who had been sweet on her old friend Dolly Hawkins, who disappeared long ago. Thad is going to divorce Arline. Katherine tells Thad she will never marry him. Thad's wife offers her $50,000 to help her in the divorce case. Kitty agrees to swear to a false story against Thad, but when the trial opens she shocks Arline by telling the truth. As the result, Thad wins his case. Kitty and Viola are sent to a fashion show at Palm Beach. They meet Arline and Curt Lawlor. Arline tells Kitty to leave the place or suffer the consequences. Kitty only laughs at Arline. Back in New York, Kitty promises to leave a party and visit Forrest at midnight, to see a gift he has for her. She meets an old scrub woman in the hall and is warned not to go into Forrest's apartment.

Now Go On

CHAPTER XXXII

I had been all sympathy for the poor, tired old scrub woman, but now I lost patience with her. She was just a meddling old busbody, I thought.

"No, dearie, you mustn't go up to that man's apartment alone," she repeated, and her work worn, wrinkled hand trembled as she touched my arm.

I decided to be pleasant with her and make light of her silliness.

"But we won't be alone," I said cheerfully. "Kayo, the Jap servant, is up there."

The old woman shook her head.

"He left half an hour ago—did the man—did Mr. Malvern tell you the servant would be there?"

"Yes," I answered and then I was annoyed, it was none of her business.

"See?" she cried eagerly clutching at this flimsy excuse. "See? He lied to you!"

"I'm late, please don't stop me," I said getting irritable.

The woman's cramp-twisted fingers held tighter to my arm. Tears came to her eyes and olled down her furrowed heeks. That hurt me and rightened me a little. I had always been soft-hearted.

"Dearie, I set my alarm and got up two hours earlier just to get here and save you," she pleaded. "I knew I had to be ere at 12."

Then I understood. She had eard me promise Forrest the ight before as we stood in the oyer to see him this night at 2. That explained her frightened expression, her seeming empt to warn me with her old eyes. The thing was tting on my nerves.

LLS HIM A DEMON

"But I can't understand what it is to you—Mr. Malvern is a dear friend—"

"They are all dear friends at the start. And you ask what it is to me? Child, don't laugh when you look at me but it wasn't so many years ago that I was just like you—just like you—I liked to play around."

She heard me gasp with astonishment. The old woman had used a phrase that I had used many and many a time, was still using.

"It's true and I want to tell you my story anyway, before you go up there—only you won't go then, and you mustn't ever."

I began to feel creepy. There was something in her voice that was ringing true as steel. She was convincing me against my wishes.

"Won't you let me tell you about it?" she pleaded.

"Well, do hurry. I am late—"

"Oh! not here—not here! He might come down any time and find me. He would be furious. He'd fire me. He owns this big building."

"I know and a lot of others."

"It's one of God's puzzles, why such men prosper; there must be a good reason that is not for us to know—"

"Why, Mr. Malvern is a splendid man," I protested.

"He's awful—he's a demon! The poor girls that have gone up there—gone up for a few minutes and came away next day—came away frightened and crying—"

ACCOMPANIES LADY

Her voice trailed into a whisper and she trembled as she looked toward the elevator.

"Come home with me, please—come home and have a cup of tea—it's only three blocks to the east," she laughed a little, a sad hollow laugh.

"Three blocks to the east from here makes a lot of difference, doesn't it? Do come—you must come."

Her hand was gentle on my arm as it pulled me. More tears were in her tired eyes, tears of anxiety as I could see. She had frightened me and made me feel sorry for her.

"All right! I'll go with you, shall I get a taxi?" I said.

"For three blocks? I should say not," and as she spoke she led me back under the winding stairs where a door led down to a basement. From there we came out into a narrow passage and to the street.

The old lady clung to my arm as if afraid that I would fly away as we started east.

She seemed almost happy, then.

The crosstown blocks are long but she didn't seem to mind it. We came to a dismal red brick tenement block and she took me through the shabby hall down some steps to a tiny tenement apartment.

"I get my rent free here for keeping the halls clean and doing odd jobs," she explained.

The room was as neat as a pin. Half a dozen religious pictures, mostly from magazines and colored sections of Sunday papers were on the wall. There was a cot, a little gas stove, table and closet for dishes. She started to brew some tea, after dusting off an already speckless chair for me.

She chattered away in quite a different voice now, as if almost happy. Instead of being frightened, or sore, at missing the visit with Forrest, I felt a sense of relief.

"That Malvern man—he is notorious," she declared, suddenly, as she rinsed the brown teapot with hot water.

"He has always been so nice and gentlemanly with me," I protested.

NEST OF SIN

"Surely—you don't catch flies with vinegar, dearie. That man is a joke with all the employes in the building. Many's the time the furnace man has come in the morning as I was leaving and asked, 'Well, how many pretty little flies walked into the old spider's parlor last night?' And many's the time I have admitted that some pretty little fool was still up there in his nest of sin on the roof."

"Are you sure?" I cried. There was no need for me to ask. The old woman's words were convincing.

Perhaps she thought she hadn't convinced me, for she came to the little stand beside me and put her hand on a worn Bible.

"As sure as I am this is the word of God," she declared, solemnly.

"I believe you," I said, softly.

"Then there are older women, too, one especially—that one so jealous of him—the little widow who asked you two what you are planning—"

"Fanny Dutton?"

"Yes. Mrs. Dutton; there were jokes about her before her old husband died. She was coming many a day to see him up there while her good old husband was down in the office. It has got so now that she stays up there more than half the week-ends."

She moved up the little stand and pushed the bible and vase of artificial daisies to one side. Then she brought the tea and a dish of crackers. Sitting down opposite me she poured the tea.

"You were dreadful mad at me at first, weren't you, dearie?"

"I—I didn't understand," I stammered.

"I heard all he said; he promised you diamonds and things, didn't he?"

"Bohemian jewelry—he has been over in Europe."

DOLLY'S MOTHER

"I wonder what girl went with him this year," she said, as if to herself and then, "Bohemian jewelry or whatever it is, the same thing. More than once has he promised some little girl who ought to have been spanked and put to sleep in a trundle bed, a ring or a bracelet or a fur neckpiece—mostly they came the next night as planned and I guess always they was sorry."

She passed the tea and looked straight at me.

"Dearie, I lied a little—I wasn't ever like you. I was an honest farmer's girl and I married a farmer boy. It—it was my little girl who was like you—who always wanted to play around. I lied because I thought if you saw how old and ugly I am it would scare you to think you might some time get that way."

"Your daughter?" I said, because I couldn't think of anything else to say.

"Yes. She came to New York—she—"

The old lady wiped her eyes and got control of herself.

"Wait, I'll show you her picture—she was beautiful—so beautiful."

With an effort the old woman got to her knees beside the cot and drew out a tattered suitcase. She opened it and reached in as if she knew, without looking, where to find what she wanted. She arose unsteadily and brought me a photograph.

As I stared at it I almost jumped out of my chair.

"It's Dolly!" I cried. "Dolly Hawkins!"

The poor old woman turned pale. She seemed to be unable to speak.

"Was Dolly Hawkins your daughter?" I cried.

DAILY SHORT STORY — A Happy Fact

(All names of characters in this story are fictitious.)

Short Story Plot Results in Author Proposing

Mrs. Musgrove had been closeted with Thatcher, editor of the Mundane Magazine, for more than an hour.

Kent Winslow, associate editor, was wondering.

Naturally, he would wonder, for Mrs. Musgrove was the sole owner of this magazine and of late it hadn't been flourishing as well as usual.

Kent Winslow was a very able and capable young man. He was just the one for his position since he was well versed in political economy, international commerce, the commercial arts, plain politics and many other subjects.

The Mundane was a magazine for busy men—thinkers who wanted to know the trend of world's events and could ill spare the time to read painfully long articles anent the movement of matters in the world. Kent Winslow prepared more than half of these articles.

Finally, Mrs. Musgrove departed, giving young Mr. Winslow a nod and cheerful word of greeting.

Alice Smithwick, Mr. Thatcher's secretary, answered the buzzer. When she came out to her desk Winslow looked at her, and, arching his eyebrows, whispered, "Something?"

She shrugged her pretty shoulders.

"Meaning that you don't know or can't tell?"

"He's sending to a literary agency for some fiction," she whispered.

Kent Winslow stared at Alice Smithwick, eyes popped and mouth agape.

"Quit rigging me, Alice," he said.

"It's straight, Kent."

"Has he gone goofy?"

Alice smiled and shook her head.

NO OFFICE SECRETS

Alice and Kent were very friendly, like a couple of pals almost, in the office. They never met outside, however.

"Is he going to start a fiction magazine?"

"I don't know, Kent; really I shouldn't have told you that much."

They smiled at each other, for they had no office secrets. Kent told Alice many things about the office business that a secretary need not know, and she told him many things that were not at all necessary to his work as associate editor.

Kent went back to his desk and sat staring at the typewritten article in front of him. The title was "More Chaos in China." Kent leaned toward alliteration. But at this moment he was not thinking of chaos in China; he was thinking of chaos in the office, if they took on a larger staff and started to publish a fiction magazine.

Mr. Thatcher came to his door.

"Er, Kent, just a moment, please."

Kent went into the office instantly. He had a hunch that he was about to learn something.

"Did you ever write fiction, Kent?" Thatcher asked.

Kent shook his head and smiled.

"No, sir. I never had any leaning toward fiction. It is light stuff, at best."

"Yes—and no," Mr. Thatcher said, after a moment of thought.

TO RUN FICTION

"I mean that fiction is read by thousands where our sort of articles are read by half a dozen."

"Naturally, but where does fiction get one? It does not enlighten, educate or aid in any way; it merely entertains."

"We work to earn money, Kent, to have luxuries and to afford to entertain ourselves. Man, naturally, wants to be entertained. What I am driving at is this. Mrs. Musgrove has convinced me that we will do better by making the Mundane a general magazine, by adding good fiction and a little good verse—"

"Fiction? Stories and poetry in the Mundane? Good heavens," Kent cried.

"After all, Mrs. Musgrove owns the magazine. She should be permitted to do as she pleases with it."

"Of course—but I cannot see where it will help us or please our class of readers."

"What I'm getting at is this. Mrs. Musgrove wants some fiction in the next number. I have sent to a literary agency to have some fiction submitted, but we ought to have at least the story in this coming number. We have to go to press day after tomorrow, so you'll have to leave out your Chaos in China article and write a story—a 4,000-word story—a love story."

"What? A story—a love story? You want me to write a love story? Why Mr. Thatcher—"

"Tut, tut, Kent; of course you can. Writing fiction is simple, it is light material, you have all the world to choose from for a plot. I'd like the story by tomorrow noon, please."

Thatcher turned back to his desk. This meant that there was no further argument.

Kent came out and went slowly to his desk. Alice watched him. Finally she went over.

"Trouble, Kent? He hasn't—er—released you, has he?" she asked, anxiously.

"Worse than firing me. Do you know what I've got to do? I've got to write a love story—4,000 words—and have it done tomorrow noon. I never wrote any story in my life. I haven't read a love story since I left college. Of all the—well, I'm stumped."

"Oh, come now, Kent, you're so clever. Just take any simple plot and write in your clear-cut narrative style."

Kent sat at his desk and thought and made notes and tore them up. Then he would think a while longer and get more ideas that were, upon consideration, fit only to be discarded.

Alice secretly watched and pitied him.

He got up and paced, he sat down and jotted notes, he tore them up and paced again.

Finally, he went over to Alice.

"I'm licked," he said.

"Oh, come now, Kent, don't say that. Why, a man with your education and wide knowledge surely can write a simple little story."

"I deal in facts, not fiction. Alice, Thatcher ought not have asked me to do this. I can array facts in a readable manner, but a love story—fooey!"

"But love is a fact, Kent."

"Is it?"

"Of course."

"How do you know?"

"Because people are forever falling in love and marrying. Just take love as a fact and write a story about it."

"I'll be doggone if I can. I'm going to go tell Thatcher to write his own love story. They want me over at the Arc Publishing Company, anyway—"

"Oh, Kent, you wouldn't leave? You wouldn't quit and call yourself licked over a silly little love story."

INVITED TO DINNER

"Not my line. Might as well ask a house painter to dash off a portrait."

He went back to his desk and scowled.

Just before it came time to quit Thatcher came out.

"How's the love story coming on, Kent?" he asked.

"Have to do it at my rooms tonight, Mr. Thatcher," he answered.

"Good idea. I expect you'll turn out a fine piece of fiction."

Thatcher departed.

Alice got her hat and then went over to Kent.

"Come home with me, Kent, and have dinner. Perhaps I can help you after dinner. I have a typewriter at home and surely you aren't afraid of mother."

"Why—why, Alice, I'd be delighted, and if you'll help me with this darn love story I'll do anything for you."

The apartment was attractive. Alice's mother was a dear, and Alice, serving the dinner, her cheeks flushed, a fluffy little house dress on in place of the plain mannish office dress, was, to Kent, an entirely different girl.

They went into the living room after dinner.

"There are," said Kent, "only so many plots and—"

"Forget plots, those cut and dried plots, Kent. Now you just think of some situation and then I'll tell you how I would start it."

"What sort of a situation?"

"Where a young man meets a girl and falls in love with her."

"And so he asks her to marry him and she consents and they marry. How the devil can I stretch that out to 4000 words?"

"But, Kent, there has to be opposition, a rival, suspense, you know, the stuff that makes a person want to see how it comes out."

"I might have my young man suddenly discover that he is in love."

"All right, but there must be some reason why he thinks the girl would not accept him."

"Well, there is—she doesn't love him."

A GOOD PLOT

"Then that's only a one-sided love story, but, Kent, how does he know the girl won't marry him or doesn't love him? Has he asked her?"

"No, he just knows. He knows that a sensible and sweet and really beautiful girl like this one would laugh at the idea of marrying such a plodder as he is."

"Then what happens?"

"Nothing—there's no story, Alice."

"But suppose he suddenly discovers that he is mistaken and that the girl has loved him right along—that will make a good story."

"How does he find this out? He doesn't propose, because he is convinced the girl would laugh at him."

"Why not have the girl tell him?"

"Would she?"

"In your story she would, Kirk."

"But would she in real life?"

"Why—why—I'm afraid I wouldn't have the courage to do that, Kirk."

"You? You wouldn't have the courage to tell—say, Alice, does that mean me? You and me—you and I—why, Alice—say—"

He had her in his arms then.

"Love," he said, "is a fact. You were right. I'm in love with you and I want to marry you, Alice."

"That will be wonderful," said Alice. "Now we'll write the story."

"What story?"

"This story—it will make a good one, but it won't be fiction, will it?"

"It will be fact—straight, happy fact, my dear girl."

"We'll never get it written, my dear boy, unless you stop kissing me. Not another kiss until the story is written."

The story was written in a remarkably short time.

YOU HAVEN'T THAT MUCH MONEY IN THE BANK!
NO, BUT I WILL HAVE AFTER YOU GIVE ME A POWER OF ATTORNEY ON YOUR CHECKING ACCOUNT! AND YOU WILL OF COURSE, DEAR, WON'T YOU? YOU'D BETTER, YOU WALRUS, OR I'LL BREAK EVERY BONE IN YOUR HEAD!

YOU DON'T SLEEP WELL EITHER. EVERY TIME I EVEN MENTION THAT RAINBOW LEAGUE YOU GET A SORT OF CHALK COLOR.
I GUESS I'VE BEEN DEMONSTRATING TOO MUCH ON SMILES. A SORT OF CHARLEY-HORSE OF THE FACE, I SUPPOSE.
I KNOW VERY WELL THERE'S SOMETHING YOU HAVEN'T TOLD ME ABOUT THIS AFFAIR AND THE WAY YOU LOOK AT ME WHEN YOU DENY IT MAKES ME POSITIVE I'M RIGHT.
THAT DIZZY LOOK YOU NOTICE NOW AND THEN IS MERELY A TOUCH OF GALLOPING DYSPEPSIA I PICKED UP EATING THREE AND FOUR LUNCHES EVERY DAY
DON'T TELL ME! EVERY TIME I WALK INTO YOUR OFFICE YOU LOOK FRIGHTENED. OH DON'T TROUBLE TO DENY IT AGAIN. I'VE BEEN THROUGH THESE THINGS BEFORE. I KNOW.
MY ONLY WORRY AT THE OFFICE IS THAT LOOKING ON THE BRIGHT SIDE ISN'T SO HOT WHEN YOU DO IT ALL DAY LONG. BEING HAPPY ALL THE TIME IS LIKE EATING WEENIES THREE TIMES A DAY. YOU SOON GET TIRED OF IT

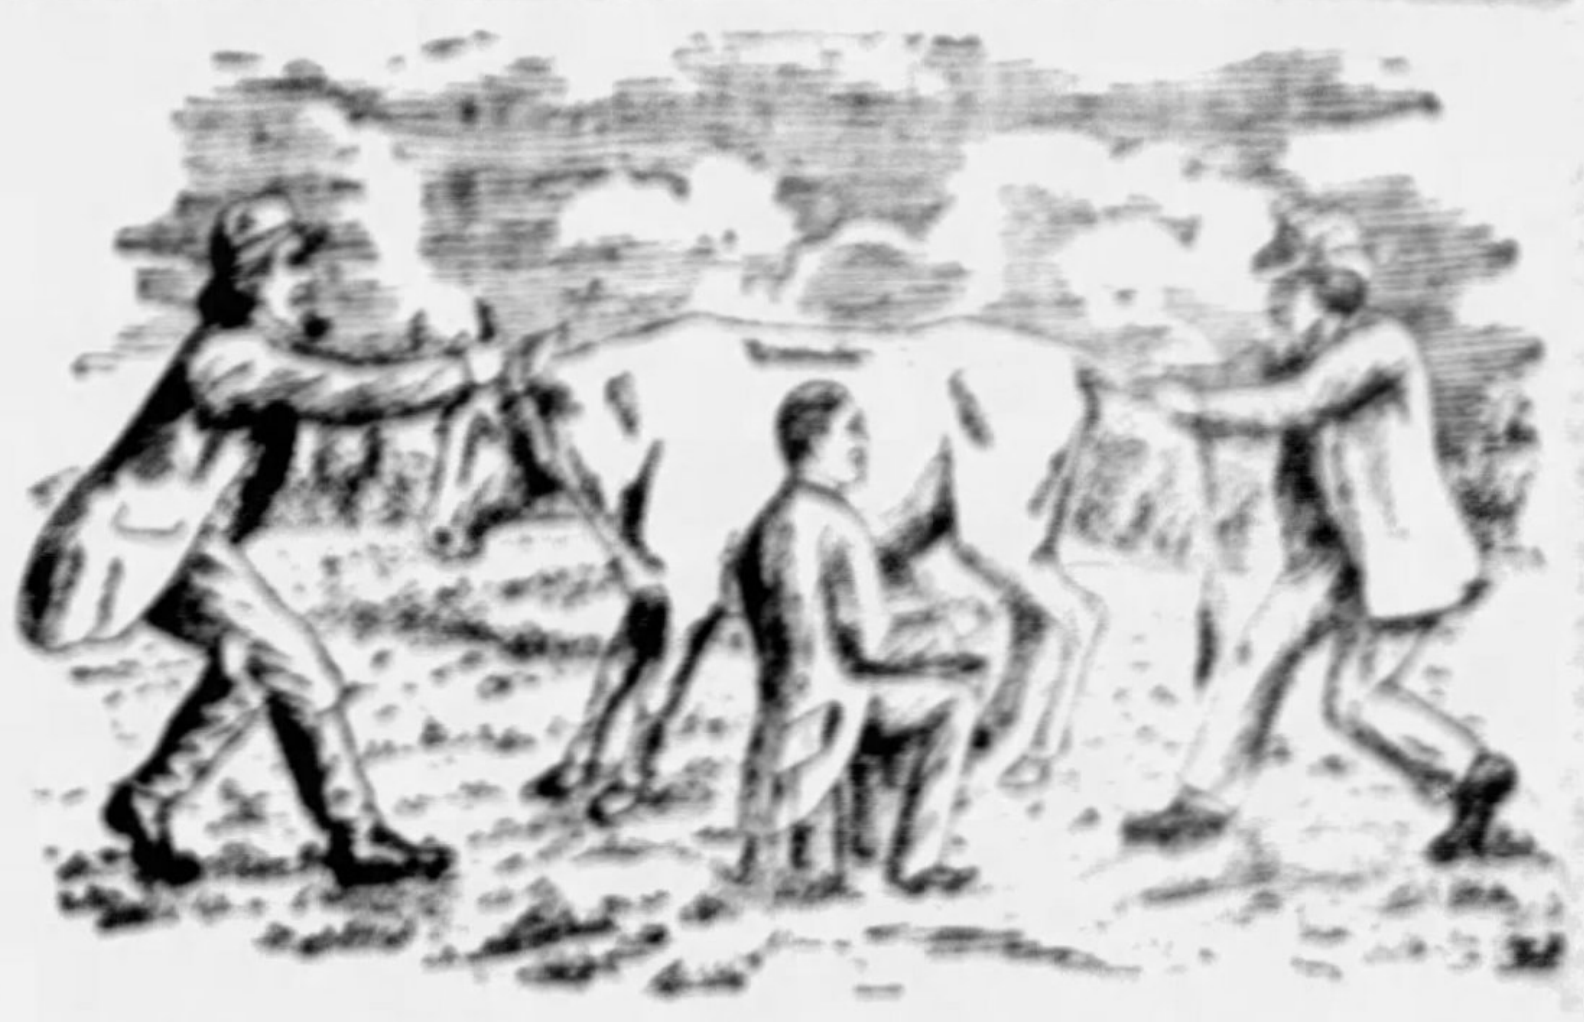
THRILLING TABLEAUX MARK END OF SUMMER DROUGHT



Congressman Frisby kindly consented to pose for the above living statue, which will be placed on Pike's Peak to commemorate his campaign slogan, "The Cow's Best Friend Is Mankind." The flashlight explosions accompanying the above photograph were interpreted by Frisby as the opening salute in his boom for the Presidential nomination. "Coolidge," says Frisby, "did not hesitate to help the farmers by posing with a pitchfork. Nor did he hesitate to help the Indians by posing with head feathers. I am now helping all dumb animals and hungry babies by posing with a ferocious milch cow." Note the big interests attempting to thwart Frisby at either end of the cow.

Bootleggers Who Sell to Children Deserve Severe Treatment. Brief Comment on Local News

The mother of a 17-year-old girl who was in Morals Court yesterday for drunkenness, one of a number of children picked up by the police in a state of intoxication, said she would like to shoot the bootlegger who gave moonshine to her daughter. Public opinion will assuredly not condemn the mother for feeling that way about it.

City and county detectives have been instructed to round up the bootleggers who have been debauching children on the North Side. It will take more than the arrest of the miscreants to stop this shameful business. They should receive severe punishment. If, instead of being held for the grand jury, they are merely sentenced by police court magistrates to pay light fines, they will be encouraged to continue operations.

A 12-year-old Bellevue girl testified in Morals Court that she had been taken by a 50-year-old man to a Woods Run speakeasy and drank liquor there. The man was fined $50. Not many parents would think that was adequate punishment if it had been their little daughter that was taken to the speakeasy.

District Attorney Park has ordered an investigation of the sale of liquor in North Side confectionery stores. It is no wonder, if liquor is sold in confectionery stores, that children are learning to drink it at an early age. Liquor was not sold in confectionery stores, and was not sold to children, before the enactment of the Volstead Act.

Congressman Clyde Kelly is out with an indorsement of the candidacy of State Senator William D. Mansfield for County Commissioner. From now on politics will occupy an increasingly important place in the news. It cannot be emphasized too strongly that there is nothing that more vitally affects the people's welfare than the election of public officials. Follow the political news closely and thereby equip yourself to vote wisely.

Mayor Kline and Controller Kerr have received a little publicity through using an airplane for their trip to New York. But the time has almost arrived when flying will cease to excite comment. Indeed it seems not impossible that some of us will live to see the day when an airplane voyage across the Atlantic will be so commonplace that no newspaper notice will be taken of it.

*The County Treasurer's office was jammed Thurs*day and yesterday by hot, uncomfortable persons seeking to pay taxes in time to receive the 5 per cent discount. The receipts Thursday were greater than the collection for any previous single day in the history of the office. The heat and irritation that so many suffered in trying to get in just under the wire could have been avoided if they had paid their taxes earlier. But some extra clerks would have given relief, too.

Reports of the clash between striking miners and deputy sheriffs at Cheswick yesterday indicate the deputies tried to intimidate the strikers. Witnesses say the officers clubbed the miners as the latter fled. No arrests were made, however. The deputies apparently think it is a less serious matter to club the strikers than to arrest them.

*The renewal of violence in the coal strike em*phasized the importance of the effort that Secretaries Doak and Lamont are making to re-establish order and stability in the coal industry. The large Pittsburgh operators who refuse to have anything to do with the proposed conference need not be surprised if they find themselves blamed for a continuance of the present chaotic condition.

*The more the grading contract for the county air*port is investigated the more questionable appears the majority county commissioners' action in awarding it, not to the low bidder, but to the third bidder, who asked and received about $500,000 more. The excuse for giving this concern the job was that it was better prepared to get it done on time, but it develops that it failed to do so.

The outlook at this writing is for another warm languorous Sunday tomorrow, a day for swinging in a hammock or for sitting in a rocker on the front porch. As you swing or rock you will enjoy looking at the pictures in the Gravure Section of the Sun-Telegraph—the reproduction in colors, for instance, of Frank O. Salisbury's painting of "Alfred the Great, Rebuilding the Walls of the City of London."

Pictures provide entertainment and edification with a minimum of mental exertion, which makes them especially appropriate for a hot summer day of rest. Important news as well as things that are merely interesting will be found depicted in photographs in the Sun-Telegraph. The "Remember?" section will bring back reminiscenses of the Rev. Billy Sunday's great campaign in Pittsburgh.

The grand jury did a good day's work Thursday in disposing of 136 cases in record time. It was a humane service to act on the charges at this time and thus make possible the release of prisoners undeserving of indictment, instead of requiring them as heretofore to remain in jail until September. Judge Gray is entitled to commendation for his prompt action in liberating the prisoners.

*It is gratifying to see candidates for judge of Com*mon Pleas Court giving consideration to the evils resulting from the long summer suspension. One of them, J. Boyd Duff, Jr., writes to the Sun-Telegraph that the fault lies, not with the judges personally but with the system. If the present methods are continued, he says, Common Pleas Court will not catch up with its work until eight more resident judges are placed on the bench.

Mr. Opper wrote the top line so we let it go. A better line would have been "A New International Rodeo."

Uncle Sam has been riding this particular goat for some time, without much success. Let us hope his lack of success may continue and that he will be rejected by the moratorium lodge, or at least keep out of it.

The three little friends, "Shoot, Boot and Snoop," of course, are put in just for scenery. The important thing in the picture is the little lady, who hasn't had much luck since Uncle Sam transferred his Secretary of State and his chief interests abroad.

AS TO THE GENTLEMAN ON ICE, BEHIND THE GLASS DOOR, YOU KNOW ALL ABOUT HIM.

You will admit that this series by Opper describes our nation more accurately than many pretentious histories could describe it.

Money—And Matri-money

If it took as much time and money to get married as it does to get out of it, matrimony would probably be as safe, lasting and fashionable as divorce.

Never say that we moderns have lost all our faith. Women still believe all the glowing promises of the beauty-cream advertisements and men still continue to buy bottles of hair-restorer and reducing belts.

A man seldom stops to ask a woman if her love will last forever, because he is usually perfectly satisfied if it will last until next week.

A husband these days is like a restaurant spoon: almost any woman who takes a fancy to him seems to regard him as just something to help herself to.

A popular bachelor complains that he can't wear beach pajamas because they are too feminine. He wants to know why it is that, every time a man discovers something comfortable or useful for himself, the women grab it and take it away from him.

It is not that women are really naggy, but it takes so much argument for a woman to convince a man that he is not going to do what he wanted to do nor going to spend his vacation the way he intended to spend it.

FRANCE DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

PARIS, By Mail.—We went back to La Tour d'Argent again this evening to dine and happily found it open. To my notion it is one of the six best restaurants in the world—my list including the Ritz Carlton and Colony, New York, the Paris Ritz, Foyot's and Horcher's in Berlin.

Situated on the Quai de la Tournelle on the left bank, it is the oldest restaurant in Paris, having opened first in 1582 near one of the gates of the city. It has occupied its present site for 100 years. And during its nearly 400 years it has specialized in roast duck.

Duck there is a rite. It is brought to you first only half cooked and before your eyes an expert, with loving care, carves it and completes the cooking over a chafing dish at your table side. He turns it tenderly at intervals and constantly spoons up the gravy to pour over it time and again.

It arrives on your plate a dull gray with gravy almost coal black. The white meat is served with the gravy and souffle potatoes, nothing else. The second course is the upper joint, very dry, and a mixed salad with a dressing touched up with garlic.

The menu warns "La grande cuisine demande beaucoup de temps," so one must wait for about an hour to be served after giving the order. It was at Tour d'Argent, under the reign of King Charles V, that forks were used for the first time. Madame de Sevigne mentions the restaurant in her letters many times.

The beautiful ladies of Henry III, Cardinal Richelieu and Henry IV here had potage made of almond milk, swans roasted on spits and cranes with plum sauce. George Sand and Alfred de Musset used to meet Alexander Dumas and Henri de Rochefort at La Tour. Napoleon III and the Duc de Morny dined there often.

It is timbered in dull oak. There is no music and studied quiet reigns. In later years Edward VII, King Leopold of Belgium, Grand Dukes of Russia, Queen Marie, the Shah of Persia, such literary lights as Anatole France and Edmond Rostand and stage stars like Rejane, Bernhardt and Mounet-Sully were regular patrons.

* * *

Only my innate reserve prevented me from skipping over to an adjoining table at La Tour to hug a fellow American. Following dinner he lit a capacious pipe. After a few puffs a waiter politely informed him there were objections. The room was a haze of cigar and cigaret smoke. "I'm funny that way too," boomed the American. "I object to cigar and cigaret smoke. When they are laid aside I'll put out my pipe." And he puffed on.

* * *

Paris is beginning to worry about the disintegration of Eiffel Tower. The first decay in the steel has been detected and experts say that the secondary stage comes quickly and will make it a menace. How to get it down is a far greater problem for engineers than was encompassed in its construction.

* * *

We bumped into Roy Howard's son Jack today. He had just arrived by boat train from the Leviathan and was on his way to the United Press offices, where he will work this summer. Last summer he worked in London and this fall will return to America for his final year at Yale. Perhaps it is a prejudice born of a long friendship with his father, but I know of no American youth whose outlook upon life is so sane and extraordinarily wholesome.

Alone in wicked rue de Lappe, lined with dark dance halls, this afternoon an Apache type lurched out of a circular bistro and blocking my path demanded brusquely: "A soo, M'soo!" It reminded me of one of those portentously pregnant moments in a French novel, and I thought of a flashing dirk and a crumpled body in a suddenly deserted rue. So I passed him a franc and thrilled: "Keep the change." When scared stiff I either thrill or hiccup.

* * *

A typical French Mamma and Papa with what Irvin Cobb calls a strain of Belgian hare debouched from a canopied carryall in the Bois this afternoon. There were in all 11 children—ranging from two years to about 15. In five minutes Papa was dozing under a tree, Mamma was knitting, four children were napping and the rest were playing a game of Rugby football. In an hour we passed them again and all were stretched out on the grass sound asleep. That was a typical French family outing.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Is tolerance a vice?

Should we be charitable toward sinners?

Should we try to understand how they got that way and do our best to relieve them from the unpleasant consequences of their folly?

A gentleman who signs himself "For Righteousness" says it is and we shouldn't. Which wouldn't be so remarkable if I didn't get scores of other letters saying the same thing. So maybe there's something to it.

"People need punishment," he starts, "or they never learn sense.

"Tolerance is the sign of a lazy conscience. WE MAKE IT EASY FOR OTHERS BECAUSE WE WANT TO TAKE IT EASY OURSELVES."

(Somebody please page Buddha, Confucius, Epictetus, Jesus of Nazareth, Socrates and other benevolent philosophers. They had it all wrong about helping that under dog.)

"We should," he snarls, "decide once for all just what is right and what is wrong. We should choose definite standards for ourselves. And then we should stick by those standards and demand that others stick by them or pay the penalty. There should be no exceptions, even though the culprit be the one we love best on earth."

(What a cozy little domestic comrade you'd make, stranger.)

"The Puritans may have made a few mistakes, but in the main they were right. There can be no compromise with evil. If a man sins, let him pay the price. Doubtless many will say that I should not condemn because I am not perfect myself. But that has nothing to do with it. If I am unfortunate enough to err, I should hate error all the more and prove it by fighting it in my fellow man."

(Boy! With arguments like that you're wasted on us simple home folk. You and Mussolini, and maybe a few deposed czars and kaisers and sultans, ought to get together.)

"The world is going to the dogs because we no longer have any fixed standards. No matter what a man does, we find some excuse for him. We blame it on his early training, bad environment or the social system. If his act is too abominable, we send for an alienist and have him declared insane. The time has come to call a halt to such tolerance and substitute good, old-fashioned severity."

That's his story. And you can bet he'll stick to it.

Which side do I take? I don't take any. I dasn't! For I have my own reasons for wanting all the tolerance there is. I'm one of those unfortunate humans whose lives are just chuck full of the painful consequences of folly.

Would I like to have those consequences sweet-kissed away? Would I like to hang them on someone's neck?

BRING ON YOUR KISSES AND SHOW ME THE NECK!

Which explains why I vote for tolerance and am downright chummy with sinners. But, of course, that may be all wrong. Maybe tolerance IS a blight. Maybe we should lambast the beam in our brother's eye, regardless of the mote in our own—

And not only heave the first stone but hire a quarry for emergencies—

If so, here's your chance to say so. Don't mind me. I'm not proud.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

Anniversaries

Each woman keeps them lavendered in love—
The records of the days she counts most dear—
And though her life on swiftest wings may move,
She pauses to review them, year by year.
She lifts them softly in remembering hands,
Her joyous moments still without a stain,
Brought back as from antipodean lands
That she may touch them lightly once again.
Time's garments, now outmoded and outgrown,
She holds them to her heart a little while,
Notes vanished graces that were once her own,
Puts on past hours with a wistful smile;
Time's garments, saved since some bright, by-gone day,
Each woman lays them te away.

Isn't It So?

Going into the red makes most people blue.

Listeners never hear good of themselves, and but rarely of anyone else.

Many girls are sent to fashionable schools away from home and some mothers think the home town boys are good enough.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. MUNDY

Are you foolish about celebrities?

Do you seek introduction to them and attempt to procure their presence at gatherings promoted by you?

Do you kow-tow to any person who gains notoriety even though it has an unfavorable tinge?

Anyone who is in print receives a certain amount of public attention as well as letters and invitations to public affairs.

The one who has attained notoriety realizes that but for the fact that he is well known very little attention would be paid to him.

Writers of signed articles are the recipients of all sorts of requests.

Scores of letters claim relationship or at least an acquaintanceship.

It seems that no step is too far for some folk to take to create an impression of intimacy between them and those whose names are prominently mentioned for one thing or another.

These facts are amusing to the one who is presented the invitations.

It is great to be appreciated for worthy accomplishment but few desire the admiration of those who try to climb on the reputations of others.

THE BUDDAH AFTER HIS 40-DAY FAST, HIDEOUS AND REVOLTING

You know about the Oriental Prince Gautama. He founded the Buddhist religion, and is now worshiped as "the Buddha" by hundreds of millions.

The rich young prince was made thoughtful by the sight of a dead beggar, decaying by the roadside. It made him think that life was hardly worth while. And, although his first baby had just been born, he got up at night, left the mother, his large collection of dancing girls, all the luxuries of his Oriental court, and went out seeking wisdom.

On one occasion he let a starving tigress eat his body that she might have milk for her cubs. Then he came back to life—not easy.

Once he spent 40 days in the forest fasting, seeking for knowledge. We hope he got the knowledge. Anyhow, as the picture on the left shows, he got very thin.

Hundreds of millions that worship "the Fasting Buddha" believe that there is something holy about the emaciated body, sunken abdomen, ribs and other bones protruding.

WE PREFER THIS PLEASING PICTURE OF A HAPPY BABY

The Brahmins are the gentlemen that, with their Brahmin priests, have steadily undermined the Buddhist religion, once very pure, tacking on to it hundreds of little gods to make the one god more interesting. Incidentally, also to make the Buddhist religion more profitable to the priests of Buddha.

Archeologists are interested in the Buddha on the left because his face is that of an Arian, made under Greek influence. The head on the right is Mongolian, the conventional figure on the forehead like the union of two snakes or the "horns of the Black Buck" represents one of the most unpleasant features of India's modern and debased religion.

We put in the picture of the cheerful and devoted black mother with the baby fastened to her back, well nourished and sleeping so peacefully, as a pleasing contrast to these two "starving Buddhas."

Who WANTS a starving Buddha, who WANTS a creature, god or no god, with all his bones showing?

There is trouble enough in life without preaching a religion of sorrow, suffering, misery here, with fear and uncertainty beyond the grave.

It would be better for those degraded Buddhists of modern days to fatten up their starved Buddha, and give him a little of the common sense and good nature of the black mother and her fat baby.
